eye and had cut over the child whose wife suffered. A severe wound was inflicted over the child's mouth and an injury was also suffered on her left wrist. Her injuries while very painful it not serious. Mrs. having suffered a shock and severe bleeding at the none immediately after the accident she began to show signs of recovery and is believed that she will improve steadily.

According to those who witnessed the accident the car was running, the cause was going at only a fair rate of speed owing, however, to the slippery pavement in rounding the curve the driver was unable to control the machine in time to avoid striking the buggy.

A number of people in the vicinity witnessed the accident but none was sufficiently near to warn the child of her danger.

Steps on a Nail

Otis Bloom on residing on Oliver avenue stepped on a nail in his home Saturday cutting the nail in his skin, and in the large fat of his right foot. He was taken to the Central Emergency hospital where Dr. John W. McMurtrie and his assistants skillfully attended to it and removed the piece of steel.

FIVE KILLED IN BALLOON CRASH

Big German Dirigible Drops 5,000 Feet.

BODIES PICKED UP UNRECOGNIZABLE

Bursting of Net Is Cause of Disaster.

Physicians Who Examine the Bodies Declare They Never Have Seen Forms So Horribly Mangled. Erbsloch, Constructor of Dirigible, Well Known in America—Big Car Falls Like a Plummet.

Cologne, Germany, July 13.—Herr Erbsloch, the world renowned German scientist and aviator and four companions, were dashed to death, today, near Puttscheid, west Germany, when the dirigible balloon, the Erbsloch, named after its inventor and constructor, fell from a height of 5,000 feet. Five heaps of crushed flesh and bone, absolutely unrecognizable, lay beneath the debris of the wrecked balloon when those who had witnessed the fall reached the spot.

The dirigible, Erbsloch, belonged to the Rhine Aerial club. It resembled a miniature Zeppelin dirigible being but one-sixth the size of the airship of the famous inventor. The Erbsloch consisted of twelve balloon nets, placed side by side in a rigid and covered frame, like the water tight compartments of a ship. A long aluminum car for the engines and passengers was swung below the gas bags. The car contained two gasoline engines of high power, which drove the fore and aft propellers that gave headway to the airship.

The Erbsloch had made several eminently satisfactory short flights, and was regarded as one of the best types of modern dirigibles, being far less cumbersome than the monster Zeppelin.

Falls Like a Plummet.

The dirigible went aloft early, today, from Dusseldorf, from which point the illfated Zeppelin passenger liner started her last voyage. In the aluminum car were Erbsloch and two companions, together with the two chufferurs whose duty it was to take care of the gasoline engines.

While near Pattscheid, one of the balloon nets in the great balloon burst, and in a twinkling all the gas bags had been torn to bits. The heavy car and the fragments of the gas bag fell like a plummet. Erbsloch and his companions fell 5,000 feet to instant death. Physicians who examined the bodies declare they never saw human forms so horribly mangled.

The dirigible was so completely wrecked by the mile fall that it is impossible to learn just what caused the fatal accident. The disaster in all its details resembles the one which befell the French army dirigible several months ago, when five French officers met death by the collapse of the gas bag.

The fatal voyage had lasted only forty-five minutes. The dirigible was almost over the village of Pattscheid in the Rhine province.

Divided Opinion.

Balloonists are divided as to the probable cause of the accident. Some believe the sun's rays expanded the gas in the balloon nets until they could no longer stand the strain while others believe one of the 125-horse-power gasoline motors exploded.

Herr Oscar Erbsloch, the aviator, was well known in the United States, having piloted the German balloon, Pommern, in the international balloon races held in St. Louis in 1907. The Pommern rose in St. Louis and landed in New Jersey, coming down only because the ocean had been reached. For this flight, the longest of the race, Erbsloch won the James Gordon Bennett cup the first prize.

On February 9 1909, Erbsloch, with three companions, made a daring flight across the Alps, starting from St. Moritz and remaining in the air thirty-three hours, landing near Budapest. The aeronaut, in the Pommern, on this trip, showed that at one time the balloon had reached a height of 19,000 feet, nearly four miles.

The Erbsloch, in which the aviator met death today, had a capacity of 2,900 cubic meters of hydrogen gas. When Erbsloch and his companions rose, before the sun had come out, it was noted that the gas bags were completely full. It is therefore highly probable that the heat of the sun, expanding the gas caused too great a strain on the bags, which exploded.

THE COURT-ROOM IS BARRED TO GOVERNOR

Jailer Refuses Admission to Him and Several Hundred Negroes.

Frankfort, Ky., July 13.—The refusal of Jailer Lucas to permit Governor Willson, Mayor Polegrove and several hundred negroes to assemble in the circuit court-room, Tuesday night, to listen to addresses by the governor and mayor is being laughed over today, though some say the jailer acted without discretion. Lucas, when asked about it, said:

"As custodian of the courthouse I am responsible for any act of mine that causes damage to the furniture or building. I had no notice that the local court had given the negroes permission to meet there, and I did not want to assume the responsibility myself, and then have to pay for damage to furniture that might have resulted. I meant nothing discourteous by my refusal, but did my duty as I saw it."

Governor Willson says he has nothing to say about it.

DECLARES RATES ARE INADEQUATE

Lemert Warns the Fraternal Companies.

THE COMMISSIONER SUBMITS HIS REPORT

Refers to Duties of Company Officials.

Lemert Says Officers Should Recommend a Readjustment of Rates Before Increased Rates Would Work a Hardship on the Old Members—Uniform Law Would Be the Remedy.

Columbus, O., July 13.—In his annual report on the condition of fraternal insurance associations, submitted to the governor, Wednesday, State Insurance Commissioner C. C. Lemert sounds a warning concerning what he term the "inadequacy of fraternal rates."

"The rates of many such associations doing business in Ohio are inadequate to enable the associations to fulfill their promises," he declared. "The officers, who are elected because of their knowledge of fraternal insurance, should recommend a readjustment of rates before the time arrives when increased rates would work a hardship, if not prohibit payment by old members. The members should be made to understand that an association can no more meet its obligations without an adequate income than an individual."

The commissioner says a possible remedy would be a uniform law in all state requiring that fraternal rates be not lower than the rates recommended by the national fraternal congress and four per cent interest.

According to the report there are SIXTY-TWO fraternal insurance associations doing business in Ohio, of which ten are Ohio associations. The total income of the sixty-two during 1909 was $8,690,194.23, while the total disbursements amounted to $7,548,927.98, of which $6,777,949.34 was paid for death claims and other benefits, the rest for salaries, commissions, fees, etc. The total assets of all SIXTY-TWO associations on January 1, 1910, was $98,602,344.25 and their total liabilities $11,149,854.5. The SIXTY-TWO associations had in force on January 1, 1910, 5,373,679 certificates, carrying $6,622,978.08 of insurance. There was in force in Ohio by all SIXTY-TWO associations on January 1, 1910, 348,004 certificates, carrying $389,220,299.13 insurance.

THE ENGLISH ARE ANXIOUS

America's Attitude Toward Japan Is Cause.

RUSSO-JAPANESE TREATY CONCERNED

British Fear Japan May Buck America.

Anxiety Is Not Lessened by the Fact the Treaty Amounts to an Almost Direct Slap at Secretary Knox's Plan for "Internationalizing" Manchurian Business Affairs. Great Concern Seen.

London, July 14.—English politicians are giving great heed to any source of information that will reveal America's attitude toward Japan in the light of the recent Russo-Japanese treaty concerning Manchuria.

The British government was aware that Russia's Manchurian policy was giving Japan great concern, and as long as Japan was fearful of further trouble from Russia, she was not looking for trouble elsewhere. Now, however, that this fear has been banished by the treaty, there is some anxiety lest Japan assume a more aggressive attitude toward the United States. This anxiety is not one whit lessened by the fact that the Russo-Japanese treaty amounted to an almost direct slap at Secretary of State Knox's plan for "internationalizing" Manchurian business affairs.

Every time there seems a possibility of trouble between Japan and the United States, the English government gets badly scared. It is unwilling to face the universal storm that would be sure to come from Englishmen should England line up with Japan against America. On the other hand, the British government does not see how it could get out of its offensive and defensive alliance with Japan.

Unpleasant Situation.

Altogether, England faces an unpleasant situation in the event of trouble between Japan and America and would go to any extreme to prevent such an outbreak.

In all other respects, England is greatly pleased with the new agreement. Japan, becoming freed of the fear of further aggression on the part of Russia, becomes a more serviceable ally for the English. Russia, relieved of fear of further trouble with Japan, becomes more formidable to Germany and Austria, which is exactly what England wants. China, of which the English are beginning to be afraid, has had a setback calculated to put a check upon whatever expansion plans it may have been maturing. And finally, providing the treaty does not result in a further strain in relations between the United States and Japan, the English are well satisfied with the collapse of Japan's ambition toward securing a foothold in Manchuria.

Russia, as a result of the treaty, is expected to begin immediately to take an increased interest in western affairs, while Japan is counted upon to proceed with the annexation of Korea at once.

THEY CAN SEE NO FLAW IN TREATY

Leading Countries Pleased with the Japanese-Russian Pact.

Washington, July 13.—The United States, Great Britain and Germany have decided that the new Russo-Japanese treaty in regard to Manchurian affairs is not a violation of the open door policy in China and does not conflict with the interests of other countries there. The text of the conference was given out at the state department. The new agreement is supplementary to the Russo-Japanese treaty of July 30, 1907, which recognized the independence and territorial integrity of China and the principle of equal opportunity in whatever concerns the commerce and industry of all nations in that empire."

Boy Is Killed While Riding on Lake at Summer Resort.

Lime Lake, N. Y., July 13.—A cloudburst, followed by an electrical display of terrific violence, broke over Lime Lake, a summer resort in the mountains and one life was lost and two persons were seriously injured within five minutes. Two inches of rain fell, causing a large loss to property and crops.

CORRESPONDENT BANISHED BY TAFT

President Objects To Being Quoted in Reference to Loeb's Visit.

Beverly, Mass., July 14.—Harry L. Dunlap, head of the Washington bureau of the New York World and its correspondent at the summer capital, was excluded from the correspondents who are received by President Taft and Secretary to the President Norton. Mr. Norton so informed Mr. Dunlap in a long letter.

The reason given is that the latter quoted President Taft directly in a story sent to the World from Beverly on Monday night. Mr. Norton says in his letter that once before Mr. Dunlap quoted Mr. Taft directly, despite a rule that the president shall not be so quoted. He says further that the quotation was inaccurate. Mr. Dunlap takes exception to the assertion that the quotation, which ran in a story at the beginning of a story which dealt about the visit of Collector Loeb to Beverly, was inaccurate in substance.

There were seven or eight correspondents at the Taft cottage when the president made the utterance quoted. Whether it was accurate in substance or verbiage.

HOPES FIGHTING GAME IS DEAD

Roosevelt Writes of Experience as Boxer.

COLONEL THINKS IT A SPLENDID SPORT

Boxing Should Be Encouraged, He Says.

Believes Young Men and Boys Should Be Trained in the Art of Self-Defense, but Is Very Much Opposed to Ring Contests as Conducted in Past Few Years—Talks of Moving Pictures.

New York, July 14.—The following article on prizefighting from the pen of Colonel Theodore Roosevelt will appear in next Saturday's Outlook:

"I have always been fond of boxing, and have always believed in it as a vigorous, manly pastime, one of those pastimes which have a distinct moral and physical value, because they encourage such essential virtues as courage, hardihood, endurance and self-control. Until within a few years I used to box a good deal myself, and when I was young several times took part in contests of a public or semi-public nature, generally, I am bound to say, with ill success. I think boxing is a sport which should be encouraged among boys and young men generally.

"When I was police commissioner I was struck by a statement made to me by Jacob Riis, to the effect that the establishment of boxing clubs in many of the poorer districts had resulted in good in rather unexpected ways; that is, it had not only given the vigorous young fellows who otherwise would join 'gangs' a legitimate outlet for their activities, but had also markedly reduced the number of affrays in which the knife was used. The spirit produced by the boxing had told against knife fighting, and distinctly discouraged unfair play.

Professionals Among His Friends.

"Therefore, from every standpoint, I believe in the encouragement of boxing as a sport. Moreover, boxing as a profession has its good side also. Among the men whose friendship and regard I have really valued I could name a number of professional boxers, including several ring champions. The men to whom I refer I found square, decent men, who showed themselves good citizens when their good citizenship was tested. I approved of the movement which, in this state at the time that I was police commissioner, resulted in the enactment of a law permitting contests between professional boxers, under conditions which were meant to safeguard the sport against brutality and the other evils which have everywhere resulted sooner or later in the suppression of the prize ring. I saw several of these public boxing contests, in which the intent of the law was carried out in good faith.

"Nevertheless, even under this law, abuses crept in and finally one or two fights occurred where the surrounding circumstances were so scandalous that when I was governor I was obliged to advocate and finally to secure the repeal of the law under which the contests took place, feeling convinced, together with the great majority of the citizens of the state, that under it almost all that made prizefighting objectionable and demoralizing had been gradually revived.

Quotes Own Experience.

"Now this was my experience—the experience of a man who, so far from being prejudiced against boxing was and is a warm advocate of it, and who at the outset had not the slightest prejudice against professional boxing, that is, boxing for purses of money and who has numbered among his friends many men who were professionals and had fought for money prizes. I am sure that what has happened in New York will happen in the nation at large and that prizefighting will be, as it ought to be, stopped in every state of the Union. Since it was stopped in New York the conditions surrounding boxing have grown worse, and not better. The money prizes fought for are enormous, and a real source of demoralization in themselves, while they are often so arranged as either to be a premium on crookedness or else to reward nearly as amply the man who fails as the man who succeeds. The betting and gambling upon the results are thoroughly unhealthy and the moving picture part of the proceedings has introduced a new method of money getting and of demoralization. In addition, the last contest provoked a very unfortunate display of race antagonism. I sincerely trust that public sentiment will be so aroused and will make itself felt so effectively as to guarantee that this is the last prizefight to take place in the United States, and it would be an admirable thing if some method could be devised to stop the exhibition of the moving pictures taken therefor.

EXPORTS OF STAPLE MATERIALS DECLINE

Cotton Is the Single Exception Shown Latest Report.

Washington, July 14.—In a statement issued by the bureau of statistics of the department of commerce and labor, yesterday, the exports of staple materials from the United States for the year ending June, 1910, shows a decline all along the line with the single exception of the value of cotton.

Wheat shows a reduction in quantity under the same period a year ago of 12,000,000 bushels, and in value of $21,000,000. The decline in value of flour exports is $3,500,000; of corn, $1,500,000; of meat and dairy products from $146,000,000 in 1909 to $110,000,000 in 1910 and food animals fell from $18,000,000 in 1909 to $12,000,000 in 1910.

The gain in cotton exports was caused by a higher market price, the quantity of cotton dropping 1½ billion pounds, although the value of the cotton exports advanced over $32,650,000 over the year ending June, 1909.

CURTISS PROVES FINE MARKSMAN

Drops Orange "Bombs" at Deck of Yacht.

SPLASHES WATER OVER THE GUESTS

Aviator Glides Away from the Ship's Guns.

Curtiss Demonstrates to Satisfaction of Army Officer That Fleet of Aeroplanes Could Blow Battleship Out of Water If Attack Is Made on Coast Cities—Trial Shows Hostile Fleet Is No Menace.

Atlantic City, July 13.—Glenn Curtiss, using oranges as "bombs," and the yacht John E., Mehere II as a target, gave a thrilling exhibition of his ability to drop high explosives on the deck of the craft. Fearing harm to the interested officials and ladies on the deck of the yacht, Curtiss placed his missiles so accurately alongside that spray was thrown over the gowns of the women on her decks. Then whirling away amid the cheers of the big crowd of spectators, Curtiss shot his plane far out to sea and beyond the range of anything but a 12-inch gun.

The test arranged by officials of the meet as the closing event of the week's aviation drew an enormous crowd to the board walk and beach. Refusal of government officials to assign a battleship or gunboat to the waters of this city to arrange for a real mimic battle, with return fire from the war vessel, resulted in the enlistment of the Mehere as the target. The first trial made by Curtiss after he arose in the air had a lifeboat as a mark, and even at 300 feet high the orange "bombs" bursted on the water with a smash that promised serious injury to persons aboard a yacht who might be in the line of fire. Curtiss signalled that he would drop his bombs only close enough to show his ability to land them on the decks had he so desired, and swept out to sea, rising until he was nearly 300 feet above the decks of the craft. The crowd cheered as the first bomb whizzed through the air and struck the water, throwing up a small geyser of water as Curtiss whirled his machine out over the ocean and the supposed range of fire of small arms.

Hostile Fleets No Menace.

"The trial shows absolutely that the day of the battleship for attack on foreign cities is nearing its end," declared Colonel William Allen Jones, retired, formerly of the United States engineer corps and probably the most interested spectator.

"Curtiss could have dropped a bomb on the deck of even that small craft with just as much ease and certainty as that with which he spun them close enough to the vessel to show his ability without endangering the people on board.

"As for hitting that swooping aeroplane from the deck of a battleship, it would be practically impossible except with rifle balls, and both engine and driver could be protected with the lightest sort of armor or bullet-proof cloth that would absolutely protect them at that height," concluded the army official, who is here in a semi-official capacity, and who has expressed his opinion that a fleet of airships could sink the most powerful battleship afloat without serious loss.

"Lack of fuel-carrying capacity would bar the aeroplane for use for anything but coast defense," continued General Jones. "I believe, however, that a fleet of say a score of aeroplanes able to slip through the air at night would not only have a chance to annihilate a ship of any size or armor, but would also disorganize a crew and drive them into a panic that would make them useless. The Curtiss plane can carry at least 300 pounds, and this amount in the most powerful of modern high explosive would be enough to sink an entire fleet of cruisers unless they succeeded in hitting the plane or its driver with a shell from a deck gun, which is unlikely."

A Strange Hairpin.

"This," said the gay bachelor, leading his visitors through the flat, "is my famous collection of hairpins."

The hairpins, 100 or more, filled a Louis Quinze cabinet. Some were of shell, some of silver, some even of gold.

"This is the strangest," said the bachelor, "this hollow glass one. See, there is a fluid in it, a perfume. And here is a tiny hole, so that, when the pin lies obliquely in the hair, the perfume is emitted slowly in delicate drops.

"It is a Japanese hairpin," he concluded. "A geisha in a Yokohama tea house gave it to me. I can still see her as she sat on her cushion, playing the samisen, while very slowly, in drops resembling tears, the perfume fell on her amber-colored cheek."

SCOTLAND YARD SEEKS CRIPPEN

twenty-seven; good looking English typist; absconded July 9; will try to leave England, probably disguised as a boy."

The woman is wanted as an accessory to the murder.

The Star, today, declares that after his wife's disappearance last February, Crippen variously told neighbors that she had gone to the continent, that she had gone to America and that she was touring with a theatrical company. Later he told them that she had died at a watering place on the continent, but the announcement published in the theatrical papers gave California as the place of death.

The Star adds that the woman now missing with Crippen is his stenographer.

Dr. Crippen was the London agent of Dr. Munyon, the Philadelphia patent medicine firm; the Dean Drug company and Dr. Eut institute, a medical concern of Paris.

It developed, this afternoon, that the Music Hall Ladies' guild, of which Mrs. Crippen was the secretary, received an obviously forged letter from her, in February, saying she was going to America.

The police charge that Dr. Crippen slew his wife, and then told her neighbors she had gone abroad. To substantiate this story, they charge, he forged the letter and then inserted the advertised notice of her death. The efforts to conceal the crime and distract attention, the police say, brand Dr. Crippen as an unusually clever criminal.

Suspicions Lulled.

Scotland Yard men, today, declared that Dr. Crippen was born in Coldwater, Michigan, was educated in Indiana and also took a degree in Los Angeles. The police say he completed his medical studies at Ann Arbor, Michigan; Cleveland, Ohio, and New York, and later practiced in Detroit, San Diego, Salt Lake City, St. Louis and Brooklyn as an eye and ear specialist.

It is said that in various places Crippen represented the Munyon company, of Philadelphia, the latest being Toronto, Canada, before his departure for England. His latest business here was as a "Yale Tooth specialist."

It seems certain that Crippen and Miss Lineve disappeared, last Saturday night, after a prolonged visit from the investigating police. It develops that at that visit Crippen admitted that his previous story about his wife's trip to America was false.

"My wife quarreled with me and left the house in anger, and I do not know where she went. I didn't want our neighbors to know she left me, so I invented the story about her trip to America. That is where I thought she went," Crippen coolly explained to the police. His story was so plausible and told with such ease that the suspicions of the police were temporarily lulled and Crippen escaped.

Two Coffins for Remains.

The police undertaker took two coffins to the house to facilitate the handling of the frightfully mutilated and decomposed body. Despite his denial, there are persistent rumors in the vicinity of the house that further startling discoveries have been made and that the police are concealing them in the hope that they will be able to make an arrest.

The government analyist, Dr. Pepper, who has made a complete investigation of the body found buried in the cellar, declared to a United Press representative, this afternoon, that positive identification would be impossible, but that the police were certain the corpse was that of Mrs. Crippen from the general shape of the body. Dr. Pepper declared the head had been crushed to a jelly with fiendish blows and would have been unrecognizable even before decomposition set in. The entire corpse was hacked and jabbed, as though with a knife.

An official of the Music Hall Ladies' guild, of which Mrs. Crippen was secretary, said, today, that guild members, astonished when she left without a word of explanation went to Dr. Crippen's office in the same building as that of the guild, and asked where she was. Crippen told them she had gone to visit her home in Los Angeles.

"We all knew there had been trouble in the family," said this woman, "so we wrote to Mrs. Crippen's stepson in California. He replied that Mrs. Crippen had never been there. The trouble between Crippen and his wife arose over his stenographer, Miss Leneve. Mrs. Crippin requested him to dismiss the typist but he invariably refused. Although Miss Leneve is English, we called her 'Mademoiselle.' She was a very showy person, wearing quantities of cheap jewelry."

THE JUNK PILE MAY BE THE FATE OF THE GALLANT OLD SLOOP-OF-WAR, PORTSMOUTH

New York, July 14.—Battered and worn from long years of active service, the old sloop-of-war, Portsmouth, the last of Uncle Sam's famous wooden vessels, will make her last voyage July 23. From her dock at Hoboken, New Jersey, the Portsmouth will be towed by a modern tug to the Brooklyn navy yard and then will either be destroyed, sold for junk or turned into a museum. The chances are that the junk heap will be the fate of the Portsmouth. The Portsmouth was first used during the Mexican war. She saw service in China and was in Farragut's fleet during the civil war. For years past she has been used as a training ship for the naval reserves. Long and thrilling has been the career of the brave old sloop-of-war and brimful of experiences, almost any one of which would make a story in itself. Around her stanch oak timbers cling memories of the days when "fourteen knots an hour in a free wind" was great time. Bodies of salt water are few whose surfaces have not been traversed by the Portsmouth. Her anchor has splashed in the deep, clear bays of fragrant tropical islands of the Pacific ocean, in peaceful inlets along the African coast and in the junk-infested harbors of Japan and China. Many a slaver has crowded on sail as the towering masts of the old Portsmouth poked themselves above the horizon, and many a doughty pirate has shown his heels when her long, black hull and white ports came into view. In many a stern chase has the Portsmouth taken part, but never in any capacity but that of pursuer. Before the days of swift steamers and transoceanic cables, when a sailor's life was full of picturesque and exciting scenes and strange peoples and their lands did not know the now omnipotent American tourist, the Portsmouth was built. When she was a young ship the Mexican war broke out. The ship's guns were used effectually in the batle of Vera Cruz, and after a long cruise around Cape Horn and up the Pacific coast she arrived at San Francisco, then Mexican territory. She sailed into San Francisco bay and took possession in the name of the United States. Later on when Commodore Perry undertook to open up the ports of China to commerce the Portsmouth played a leading part. While anchored in Canton bay, together with the frigates, San Jacinto and Levant, to guard the rights of American citizens, a shot from one of the batteries flew threw the rigging of the Portsmouth. For some time the Chinese had been menacing the Americans, and the shot capped the climax. Captain Henry Hull Foote, in command, did not wait to inquire the cause, but promptly "beat to quarters" and with his three ships opened fire on the shore batteries. Jackies were landed under cover of the guns, and the fort was crushed. As the American tars entered on one side there was a hasty exit of Chinese at the other, for the Celestials knew that the "white devils" were in earnest. The noble Portsmouth had borne the stars and stripes aloft through thick and thin for twenty years when the civil war came on, but her severest test was yet to be. With Admiral Farragut's fleet the Portsmouth passed up the Mississippi river to Forts Jackson and St. Philip. The large sloop-of-war was not meant for a river boat, and it was thought best that she should be towed. When the memorable engagement began the Portsmouth gave the batteries broadside after broadside. Shot and shell rained on her, but she went on until a ball cut her tow line. The good old ship drifted helplessly about for a time, still exchanging shots with the batteries, and it was at last decided to get up sail. It is said that the old ship maneuvered about the river like a yacht, dodging the fire rafts which were directed at her and pouring a steady stream of iron and shell against the confederate batteries. Teis feat of sailing about in a river was an almost unheard of thing for so large a vessel, and, considering the heavy fire under which the Portsmouth performed her amazing feat, was unprecedented. The result of the battle is well known. The surrender of the city of New Orleans, the destruction of the confederate fleet and subsequent capture of Mobile are among the greatest exploits of American naval heroes. Through all this went the Portsmouth. This was the Portsmouth's last great engagement. After the war she was put on station duty for a time and later joined a training squadron.

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR SAVES PEOPLE MONEY

He Forgets To Sign a Certain Resolution.

THE STATE HOSPITAL FARM MAKING MONEY

Ohio Man Just Completes His Fourth Term in the Penitentiary—He Enters First Time at Twenty and Comes Out Now at Forty-Three. Judge Overrules Motion.

Columbus, July 15.—The resolution adopted by the legislature providing for the printing of 16,000 sets of Howe's histories of Ohio is no good. Lieutenant Governor Francis W. Treadway, presiding officer of the senate, forgot to sign the resolution, and this, so the attorney general holds, renders it nugatory. Each legislator was to get 100 sets and maybe there won't be a yell when they learn of the ruling. It will be recalled that the lieutenant governor was opposed to the resolution. He was somewhat remiss in not signing and thus legalizing the resolution, but as this saves the people of Ohio many thousands of their good dollars they will not charge it up against him. They will probably be pleased rather than resentful.

Making Money.

Dr. A. F. Shepherd, superintendent of the Dayton state hospital, who was in Columbus the other day with former Prosecuting Attorney Nevin, of Montgomery county, said that the farm of that institution had cleared $15,000 during the past year. The state paid $80,000 for the farm, and at the present rate it will pay for itself within a few years. Dr. Shepherd has been advised by the state board of charities that $3.10 is the sum fixed by that body to be collected from patients who are able to pay the state for their keep and care. Dr. Shepherd saw the attorney general regarding a contract for paving to be made by the city and state in front of the hospital.

Completes Fourth Term.

Stephen Koehler, forty-three, has completed his fourth term in the penitentiary. The officials expect to see him back again. He was twenty years old when he was sent up the first time. He was sent up from Ashtabula county. His first offense was for the theft of a mare. The second and third time he was sentenced for larceny and the last time for burglary and larceny.

Judge Overrules Motion.

Judge Rogers has decided that the bondsmen of ex-State Treasurer McKinnon must make answer to the suit of the attorney general for interest money claimed to have been withheld from the state. The judge overruled three motions by the defendant—to make definite and certain, to separately state the several causes of action and to strike out certain allegations.

WASP IS FRIEND OF MINERS

Active In Ridding Cabins of the Pest of Spiders and Therefore Welcomed and Protected.

The miners of Colorado, who have built cabins on the mountain sides, know what a pest the small brown wood-spider proves to be. They throw their webs over your best clothes, cooking utensils and in every corner, where you can get them in your eyes and mouth. Not only that, but they will drop into the frying pan, water bucket, or upon the table where you are eating. But nature furnished a remedy and a friend when she gave the spider hawk. The name is given by miners to a small, steel-blue wasp, almost three-fourths of an inch in length. He can easily be recognized, by the quick, nervous strokes of his wings. They build a nest up among the rafters of your cabin, of wood-pulp or furze, from the outer coating of old, dead trees. Then they are ready for business. Every few minutes you can see your hawk climb up the rafters with a spider, sometimes carrying one to four or five times its own weight. Sometimes they get a spider so heavy that they will fall many times before they succeed in reaching their nest. They never give up, but keep on trying until they succeed. When the spider is safely placed in the nest, the female hawk deposits her egg in the dead body. The hawks live only in pairs, as far as observation goes. They become rather tame, and seem to be obliged to you for building the spider-trap for their benefit.

CALEDONIA VISITED BY ANOTHER COSTLY FIRE

The Resler Lumber Yard Is Entirely Consumed.

BLAZE THREATENS ENTIRE NORTH END

Distress Call Was Sent to Marion for Aid, but Caledonia Firemen Had Gained Control Before Special Train Started—Damage Estimated at Six Thousand Dollars.

Caledonia, O., July 15.—[Special.]—The largest fire in this place in years occurred about 2:30 o'clock this morning when J. E. Resler's lumber yard and storage room were totally destroyed, entailing a loss of over $6,000.

About 2:30 o'clock, Mrs. J. B. Harrison, who lives near the yards, which are located between High and Main streets, just north of the railroads, went to the well to get a drink for her children, and noticed flames shooting up from the boiler room of the Resler plant. Her husband immediately sent in the alarm, and in a short time the local fire department and a large crowd of spectators were on the scene.

The department laddies fought the flames until 5:30 o'clock this morning, before the fire could be gotten under control. At one time it looked as though the fire would spread over that entire section of the village, and the Marion department was called out and was already loaded on the train, when notified that the local company had succeeded in controlling the fire. By great effort the elevator, and a large steel building filled with hay, located a short distance to the west, were both saved. Both caught fire several times. The roof of the home of Henry Groves, a block and a half away, caught fire from sparks, but was extinguished with a few buckets of water. Had there been a high wind, the entire north end of the town would have been swept by the fire.

The lumber yard, containing a large amount of valuable lumber, the planing mill, all of the machinery, the office and office fixtures, the storage room containing a large amount of flour and other contents, were totally destroyed and the elevator and coal sheds were damaged. Two carloads of oats, which Mr. Resler had loaded ready for shipment, were pulled a safe distance west on the tracks, by the section men.

As the fire started in the boiler room it is supposed that it started from the furnace, as there had been a fire in it the day before. The building had been burning only a short time when discovered, but had gained such headway before the department arrived that it could not be saved.

The loss is estimated at $6,000, only partially covered by insurance.

LION'S HEAD ALWAYS IN USE

From Earliest Times It Has Been Associated With Fountains and Flowing Water.

"The sun glows in the Lion," says Seneca, meaning that when the sun enters the sign of Leo at the summer solstice the highest temperature of the year is experienced. We may say on the other hand that the Babylonian astrologers thousands of years ago placed the king of beasts, the fiery and ferocious lion, in that part of the zodiac which the sun enters at the summer solstice.

The constellation which is called Leo bears very little resemblance to the outline of a lion. Probably the name was originally applied only to its principal star, Regulus. It is to this constellation in the zodiac that we owe the countless water spewing lions' heads which are found in ancient and modern fountains, because in the latter part of July, while the sun is still in the sign Leo, the Nile is at its highest level.

Furthermore, the lion's head with widely open jaws is in itself very suitable for the mouth of a fountain or waterspout. This decorative motif was employed universally throughout the Greco-Roman world. Lions' heads are found used in this way at Athens, Ephesus, Olympia, Agrigentum and countless other places. It is not quite certain that this employment of the lion's head originated in Egypt. Curtius describes an Assyrian bas-relief from Bairan showing water streaming from a ring shaped vessel. A lion stands as if on guard on either side of the fountain.

The water clock, which was used in judicial proceedings, had the form of a lion and a name which means the guardian of the stream. Hence the idea of protection may have been the origin of the association of lions with fountains, and this custom may have originated in Asia.—Scientific American.

ANNUAL MEETING OF MARION MERCHANTS

Is Held at the Y. M. C. A. Building Tuesday Night.

J E PHILLIPS IS THE NEW PRESIDENT

Arrangements Made for Merchants' Day at the Marion County Chautauqua and the Merchants' Annual Outing—Senator Cameron Speaks on Subject of Taxation.

Many important matters were discussed at the annual meeting of the Marion Retail Merchants' association, held in the gymnasium of the Y. M. C. A. building, Tuesday evening. There was a good attendance, and the meeting proved highly interesting.

Among the first matters given attention after the meeting had been called to order, by the president, Earl T. Smart, was the reading of the report of the secretary and the election of officers for the ensuing year. The following officers were chosen:

J. E. Phillips, president; W. B. Dennis, M. V. Hess, D. A. Frank, Henry Studley and Frank Schaffner, vice-presidents; Morgan Burke, secretary, and John E. Waddell, treasurer.

Members of the executive committee elected are R. T. Lewis, chairman, J. B. Layton, S. G. Kleinmaier, Harry Haberman, C. Z. Zachman, W. L. Warner and Earl T. Smart.

During the evening, Senator R. L. Cameron, of Marysville, gave an interesting talk upon taxation. He spoke from the standpoint of the new taxation laws, and stated that while he believed the law was a good one, there were some defects which would be eradicated as soon as the system is worked out. The measures now being taken are the first steps toward getting equal and fair taxation.

Mr. Cameron was given close attention.

W. G. Harding, as president of the Marion County Chautauqua association, gave a brief talk, in which he told of the excellence of the Chautauqua program. It is the best and most expensive week's entertainment that has ever been given in Ohio on a similar plan, and there is every reason why the members of the Merchants' association should use every effort in promoting the enterprise. If it is a success it will be a permanent feature.

The members of the association voted to close their respective places of business, Wednesday afternoon of Chautauqua week. This day will be known as Merchants' day, and there will be various features of interest. Senator Dolliver will be on the program of the afternoon. In the evening, a basket picnic will be enjoyed, and at intervals it is planned to have various entertainments in which the merchants and clerks, together with their families will participate.

A committee appointed to arrange for this event is composed of C. Z. Zachman, Homer Waddell, Meyer Hess, J. B. Layton and Harry Haberman.

During the evening, a discussion was engaged in relative to joining more actively with the Commercial club members in furthering the commercial interests of Marion. The matter was well discussed, and a committee was appointed to confer with the Commercial club members. The following are the members: S. G. Kleinmaier, Harry Haberman, C. Z. Zachman, W. L. Warner and Earl T. Smart.

Arrangements were made for the annual merchants' excursion to be run to Cedar Point, Tuesday, August 2.

Resolutions were passed on the death of D. F. Edwards and Frank Ogley, members of the association.

Musical intervals during the evening, [illegible] was furnished by L. B. McNeal, Z. A. Meredith, Miss Mary Dennison Gaile, Miss Edna Schaffner and Miss Elizabeth Armstrong, of Piqua. Refreshments were served during the evening.

PETTY THIEVERY ON EAST CHURCH STREET

Thieves Give an Encore at a Couple of Homes.

Petty thievery is becoming rather common on east Church street, the stuff carried off being eatables as usual. One night last week, thieves visited the homes of George E. Frank and Martin J. Burke, and night before last the same homes and the residence of John E. Davis were visited and a lot of foodstuffs carried off.

There is some talk of organizing a corps of watchful committee out that way to [illegible] the prowlers.

LEAVE TO FILE A PETITION IN ERROR

Granted W. I. Long, Thomas Ruble and Edmond Rice

BY JUDGE SCOFIELD IN COMMON PLEAS

The Three Are Fined in the Mayor's Court for Alleged Gambling—Motion for New Trial in the Boor Divorce Matter—Receiver Ordered To Sell Plant.

Leave to file a petition-in-error in common pleas court to reverse the finding in the mayor's court was granted W. I. Long, Thomas Ruble and Edmond Rose by Judge W. E. Scofield, Wednesday, in the matter of the state of Ohio against them. Long, Ruble and Rice were arrested and taken before Mayor Seiter some time ago on a charge of gambling, they having been found, it is alleged, in a gambling-room. They were found guilty by the mayor, and fines were imposed upon them.

In the divorce matter of John Boor against Josephine Boor, in common pleas court, a motion for a new trial was overruled by Judge W. E. Scofield, Wednesday. The plaintiff had previously filed a petition asking that the decree of divorce be modified in order that he might see the child which was given into the custody of the defendant when the divorce was granted. This petition was dismissed at the time.

An application for a divorce was filed by Mary J. Goon against William N. Goon in common pleas court, Wednesday, by Attorney H. Edmund Hill. The plaintiff says in her petition that she was married to the defendant April 14, 1906, in this city, and that she has ever remained a faithful and true wife. There are no children. For the past fourteen months, the two have not been living together. For three years past the defendant has not contributed properly to her maintenance and support, and inasmuch as he is an able-bodied man, she asks that she be given a decree of divorce and alimony.

In the case of Charles Reiger against the Marion Foundry and Machine company, the receiver, M. H. Kirchner, has been given authority to sell the real estate and personal property at private sale.

In the case of Jacob F. Lust and John DeTurk against George Tipton, an action on account, the defendant has filed a petition-in-error in common pleas court, and asks that the judgment rendered in the court of Justice C. H. Conley be reversed. In Conley's court, a judgment of $26.32 was given.

An application for divorce was filed in the common pleas court, Thursday, by Mrs. Lula J. Wyant, through her attorney H. Edmund Hill, against Thurman E. Wyant. In her petition the plaintiff sets up that she was married to the defendant on November 23, 1903, at Cleveland, Ohio, and that there have been no children born. She relates that she has been a faithful and true wife and that the plaintiff has been willfully absent for more than three years, and left her without provocation February 1, 1906. She avers that he has contributed nothing to her support for the past three years. She prays that she be given a decree of divorce and reasonable alimony, and that she be restored to her maiden name, Lulu J. Carter.

In the case of Fred L. Carhart against Arthur F. Benedict, the answer and cross petition of James P. Gerhart was filed in the court of common pleas, Thursday. The defendant sets up that on February 16, 1910, he recovered a judgment against the defendant in the court of Justice C. H. Conley in the sum of $16.27, together with the costs and interest on the same, which still remains due. He asks that the property described in the plaintiff's petition be sold and that his claim be paid out of the proceeds.

In the matter of F. L. Carhart against A. F. Benedict, in the common pleas court, the cross petition of Elmer J. Cox has been filed in which he sets up that on January 15, 1910, he recovered against the defendant, A. F. Benedict, a judgment of $151.80, together with costs and interest, which is wholly unpaid. He asks that the property, described in the plaintiff's petition, be sold and that he be paid out of the proceeds.

In the matter of Frank Dixon against Gertrude Matthews, in the court of Justice C. H. Conley, the defendant has brought action in the common pleas court in an appeal from the court of Justice Conley, in which court the plaintiff was given a verdict for $6.90 for labor.

A wireless telegraph station was established near the lighthouse in Valparaiso last year, and a message was received from a battleship at a distance of 380 miles from shore. It is proposed to increase the strength of this station, until it will have a radius of at least 800 miles.

THE SCHMIDT DRUG STORE BURGLARIZED

Cash Register Touched for $35 Wednesday Night.

EIGHTY-SIX PENNIES LEFT BY BURGLARS

Twenty-Six Dollars in a Nearby Drawer Are Not Found by Them. Two-Cent Lever Opens the Cash Register—Store Is Found Open by Drayman, Thursday Morning.

The Schmidt & Company drug store was burglarized, Wednesday night, and the thief or thieves relieved the cash register of about $35. The burglary was not discovered until Thursday, when Fred Flocken went to open the store and discovered that the front door was unlocked.

The receipts are usually taken out of the cash register and placed in the safe at night, but Mr. Schmidt being away, they were left in the register so that he could make up the cash next morning. Mr. Flocken closed the store shortly before 11 o'clock, and joined a friend who was waiting for him on the outside, and the two started home together. He is positive that he locked the door before leaving from a remark which was dropped.

J. A. Urton, the drayman, was in the store Thursday morning before Flocken arrived, he having found the door open and entered to see if there were any orders for him, but found nobody.

The thieves relieved the cash register of all the money with the exception of eighty-four pennies. Sixty cents lying on a shelf next to the register was overlooked. In a drawer nearby was $25, and this was still there Thursday morning. The two-cent key on the end of the register was pressed to open it and Mr. Flocken says that he does not remember of making a two-cent sale before leaving.

Nothing else in the store was disturbed, and the indications are that the register was the only thing touched. The fact that some peanut shells were found on the floor near the door leads to the belief that while one fellow extracted the cash from the drawer, another stood watch, cooly eating peanuts.

It is supposed that the lock was picked as there are but two keys to the door, one in the possession of Mr. Schmidt and the other in possession of Mr. Flocken.

The burglary was reported to the police, but as they have no clue to work on, there is little chance of apprehending the thieves.

Complaint was made to the police, Wednesday, by some residents of Fairground street, that some agents for the Empire Picture company were trying to intimidate some customers into paying for proofs of pictures before the delivery of the pictures and that the original pictures are not returned. The chief made an effort, Thursday, to locate the agents of the company, but they could not be found.

Harley Smith, residing four miles southeast of the city, reported to Chief Klinefelter, Wednesday, that he had a runaway near the Canaan church, shortly after 8 o'clock Tuesday night, and that he had been unable to locate his horse and what was left of the buggy. When the horse started, the top of the buggy was torn off, and Smith was thrown from the rig, but escaped serious injury. The horse was traced as far as the Pleasant church, where track was lost.

E. D. Kimmel, of No. 133 Scioto street, made complaint to Chief Klinefelter, Wednesday, that his wife, and her father, Alfred A. Hatton, were conspiring to break up his home, and that Hatton, aided and abetted by his, Kimmel's wife, last Monday, had kidnaped his, Kimmel's, two-year-old daughter, Helen. Hatton came here from Cadiz, and Kimmel believes that he has taken the child to that place.

The chief told him that no action could be taken unless he, Kimmel, swore out a warrant for Hatton's arrest.

Kimmel said he would take a little time to consider the matter.

Meets at the Home of Miss Barringer Tuesday Night.

An interesting and well-attended meeting was held by the members of the Young People's alliance of the Calvary Evangelical church at the home of Miss Eva Barringer, of St. James street, Tuesday evening. The meeting was opened with devotions and a song service. At a business session, arrangements were made, in part, for the convention to be held at Mansfield next year. During the evening, a debate was held, the question being "Resolved, That the Accumulation of Wealth Is a Benefit to the United States." Miss Sarah Myers and L. D. Zachman argued the affirmative, and Earl Ruhlman and John Zachman spoke on the negative side of the question. The judges, Miss Clara Klinefelter, Michael Zachman and Reuben Stoll, rendered a verdict in favor of the negative side. The Calvary male quartet sang during the evening. Refreshments were served, and a social time was enjoyed.

The next meeting will be held in a month at the home of Miss Clara Klinefelter on south High street.

Suit Is Withdrawn.

The following from Tuesday's Ohio State Journal will be of interest here where the Columbus Casualty company has many policy holders:

As was forecast a week ago, the suit of E. J. Smith against the Columbus Casualty company, in which he sought to have a receiver appointed, was dismissed yesterday. Settlement was made out of court. Smith's stock was purchased outright. Attorneys for the Casualty company said, a few days ago, that the suit was simply the outgrowth of a quarrel among rival stockholders.

MUST CHOOSE BETWEEN WIFE AND THE AIR

New York, July 14.—Clifford B. Harmon must choose between his airship and his wife—that is, Mrs. Harmon says she "hopes my husband is satisfied with his flying efforts of the past and will stop them now." Mr. Harmon, who has five French machinists that he keeps busy tinkering with his airships, is trying to convince his wife that he is not going to be killed. In the meantime he is resting from his attack on a tree, the tree still being in position, while Mr. Harmon is nursing a number of bruises. Mr. Harmon is one of the wealthiest real estate men in New York. Riding in the air is his hobby. He wants to enter some of the races between New York and Chicago, but Mrs. Harmon says no, and in the long-distance contests it looks as though Mrs. Harmon would win.

AN EIGHT-DAY CAMP DOWN AT MARIETTA

Will Be Enjoyed by Boys of D Company.

CAMP WILL OPEN WEEK FROM MONDAY

Second Bgirade Will Be Divided into Two Armies, the Blue and the Brown, and a Mimic War Will Be Carried on by the Two Divisions of the Brigade.

An eight-day camp at Marietta, beginning July 25, is in store for the members of D company, Fourth O. N. G., and the local men are eagerly looking forward to a week of genuine soldier life at this time. This will be the only camp for the local boys this year, and the men will not go to Sparta, Wisconsin, or Fort Benjamin Harrison, as was originally planned.

The Second brigade, composed of three regiments, at this time will be engaged in fighting out a magnificent mimic war, one of the best ever participated in by Ohio troops. The local men will be in camp at the fairground at Marietta and will take active part in all of the maneuvers and sham battles, and will gain a knowledge of real soldier life such as few have ever had the privilege of securing. The rough and hilly country tends to make the site an ideal one, and there are many natural advantages.

The brigade of which D company is a part will be divided into hostile armies, the blue and the brown. These will have separate camps and will act as separate forces. The Seventh regiment and B troop of Columbus will act as a defensive army, and the Eighth and Fourth regiments will be the attacking army. The Second brigade will be under General Speaks, who will have charge generally of the maneuvers.

A number of the Ohio guardsmen are now at Sparta, Wisconsin, where they are to take part in the maneuvers there, but D company will not take part in these.

AUSTRIAN FAILS TO KEEP PART OF PACT

He Shoots Woman He Loves, but He Fails To End Own Life.

New York, July 14.—What was at first thought to have been an attempted murder by burglars, yesterday, developed into a strange suicide pact, in which the man failed to keep his part of the agreement.

When Mrs. Antoinette Skoors was found in her room, suffering mortal wounds from three revolver shots, she told the police she had been shot by a burglar. Later her husband found letters written by Casimir Malski which indicated that Malski had shot the woman. The man was arrested and admitted that he fired the shots, adding that he had attempted to kill himself, but that the bullets went wild.

According to the story Malski told the police, and the letters he wrote, he and the woman had loved each other in Austria. Her marriage separated them. When they met here their love was renewed. Malski said they agreed they could not be together as long as they were alive, but believed they would be together forever in eternity, whereupon he shot her and tried to kill himself.

HOCKING VALLEY SUFFERS WRECK

Accident Occurs at Ackerman Station, Tuesday Night.

ENGINE DITCHED AND EIGHT CARS WRECKED

Two Men Are Injured as a Result of the Wreck—Fireman Austin J. Maloney Will Lose His Left Arm and Brakeman Elmer R. Ranck Suffers Injured Ankle.

Traffic on the Hocking Valley, Wednesday, was seriously tied up as a result of a wreck at Ackerman station, several miles north of Columbus, Tuesday night, when two men were injured, an engine was ditched and eight cars were broken into kindling wood.

An extra freight drawn by engine No 276, southbound, and the second section of a regular freight, drawn by engine, No. 71, met in a sideswipe collision As the extra started up from the station after the first section had passed it was struck by the second section of the regular freight, and almost totally wrecked, while the regular train was not seriously damaged. The road bed was torn up for rods, and it was necessary to detour many trains. All of the trains were late

Austin J. Maloney, a fireman, who is well known among local railroad men, had his left arm so badly crushed that it will be necessary to amputate it, and Elmer R Ranck, a brakeman, had his left ankle badly injured. Both men reside at Bucyrus. They are now in a hospital at Columbus.

The wrecking crews were busy on the scene until late Wednesday morning.

THE SOUL CRISES OF THE CHRIST

By William T. Ellis.

The International Sunday-School Lesson for July 17 Is "Peter's Confession." Matthew 16:13-28.

The person who finds life stale and mechanical and uninteresting, if such there be, would do well to journey to the nearest metropolitan railway station, or to a steamship pier on sailing day He would find his indifference strangely stirred by the manifest tragedies of farewells, partings and sundered lives The heart-break of these last words and last embraces appeals to the most stolid. Life is full of these vital leave-takings.

Jesus had come to one of them, in the passage which the Sunday-schools now are studying This experience of Peter's confession and of the transfiguration, which will be considered next week, have been called, "The Passion of the North." The great-souled Christ underwent crises beneath the shadow of snow-capped Hermon Then He faced in all its vivid and inexorable reality, the fact of the cross. In His agony of spirit He shared His burden with His friends and leaned upon them for comfort in a fashion that make the humanness of Jesus nigh to us all His hunger for appreciation and His grateful acknowledgement of Peter's insight, are close kin to the experiences of all sensitive souls.

They Say."

"They say" so many things that "they" may often be disregarded Not always, though, even Jesus was solicitous about public opinion He kept himself aware of the real thought of his time, as every leader must do "Who do men say that the 'Son of Man' is-" He asked His cabinet, in confidential session. The answer—that He was John the Baptist, or Elijah, or another prophet-showed how public opinion may be mistaken. Commonly we judge men at less than their real value. On the whole our leaders are probably credited below the worth of their best selves. Jesus was more than even His most sanguine adherents believed him to be.

"It doesn't matter what one thinks" runs the loose remark. Quite the contrary; on every subject of importance it does matter tremendously, and most of all what one thinks of Christ. The statement may be made in all boldness that Jesus Christ is today the world's most living issue; and what men think of Him is of tremendously greater concern than what they think of socialism or the tariff or the labor question or the race question or the trust question or anything else.

Thoughtful persons will not miss the meaning of the fact that North America's most cosmopolitan convention was that which brought the world's Sunday-school workers together a few weeks ago in Washington Even more meaningful was the epochal gathering in Edinburg last month, when the captains of the kingdom of heaven gathered from the remotest corners of the earth, in the greatest church council ever held since men began to date their calendars "A. D" And both of these great conventions had the personality and love of Jesus for their central thought We can almost hear today's wonderful answer, echoing from the whole world, to that repeated question, "Who say ye that I am?"

Impulse's Clear Sight

Do business, if you must, with the cold, careful, calculating head, but for a friend seek out the fervid, enthusiastic, impulsive one Philip might do for the secretary of the cabinet of Jesus, but Peter was its militant moving spirit. The warm heart often sees more clearly than the deliberate mind, for truest vision belongs to love. Peter stumbled, you say? Yes, but he also gloriously stood. The heart, like his may have moods, but the lonely and love-hungry know how comfortable it is to lean upon.

It is sweet to the ear of the burdened and soul-wrought Teacher to hear Peter's swift, sure answer, "Thou art the Christ, the son of the living God." Peter was a Jew, and he knew full well the portent of this confession, though the significance is nearly lost upon us who have always esteemed the words Jesus and Christ synonymous. Clear as a bullet's song rang Peter's declaration; he bore witness that ye believe this man with whom he had traveled more than two years to be more than man, and none other than the long-expected Messiah of the race. Would that all of the disciples of the Nazarene in our own day had Peter's clear faith.

Comfort for a Lecturer.

Only the teacher who catches the flash of genius and understanding in the eye of one cut out of many commonplace pupils can appreciate the thrill which shot through the heart of Jesus at these words of Peter. He had been sad, lonely and misunderstood The burden of Calvary rested heavily upon His heart. The solitary way, which He had walked had wearied Him sorely. But to be understood by a friend that is comfort indeed. It is good to recall that the Peter of comprehending sympathy is more common than in our discouragement we had realized

The inventor's "Eureka" is no more jubilant than the realization by Jesus that His disciples—at least in person of their leader—had grasped the true significance of His mission Up to this point He had been leading them. For this purpose He had opened his heart. This tremendous demonstration was necessary before they could be ready to carry on the work which in a few months He was to lay on their shoulders

In His exultation, the Master reminded Himself and His friends that this revelation had come from the Father in heaven. He never lost His confidence in the co-working of God The witness-bearing had been by the Father to Peter, before it was given by Peter to the Son. No spiritual truth is ever discovered, except by divinely—imparted insight.

Bed Rock Confession.

The bed-rock of witness-bearing is the foundation upon which, next to the Chief Corner Stone, the Christian church is built. "Let the Redeemed of the Lord say so" is the one sufficient program for the propogation of the evangel The free utterance of the saved saves the world. Is it any wonder that Jesus called Peter's confession a rock-foundation and Peter himself one of the foundation stones?

Well says Dr C E Jefferson, "Our cities are crying for rock Christians. Of gentle Christians, and affable Christians, and kind-hearted Christians we have abundance Christians should stand like rock amid the seas which surge and roar Like rock they should stand around the Lord's day, beating back the social and industrial forces which are rolling in like a flood Nothing but rock will save New York and Chicago, Boston and San Francisco, from the fate of Sodom and Gomorrah.

The Shared Sorrow.

The Chief Magistrate's cabinet understand the plans which are not revealed to the public "Unto you it is given to know," said the Leader to His little company of intimate friends In this solemn retreat in Caesarea Phillippi He shared with them His deepest feelings. A sorrow shared is halved. So the Lord told the twelve how He must go down into the midst of His enemies in Jerusalem, to be prosecuted by the ecclesiastics, be crucified, and then, on the third day, be raised again.

This program was too much for Peter. His comprehension did not yet run this far; he could not conceive of the sorrowful way as the path to victory So he came short of helping his Master to be his best. Therein friendship commonly fails of its highest office. Many a man is spoiled because he listens to the entreaties of loved ones who, in misguided tenderness, counsel the lot of commonplace comfort, rather than that of hard service and bitter sacrifice. The wise friend, be that friend mother, wife or comrade, will spur a loved one on to noblest endeavor, whatever the hardship involved. At its best friendship always is somewhat Spartan in character.

"In Hoc Signo."

Scholars who have traced ancient symbols back toward their beginnings say that the cross, in one form or another, is the oldest of all symbols. That it is today the commonest is because Jesus laid down the principle, in this conversation and elsewhere, that the mark of discipleship for all who follow Him is a cross; and that the law of self-sacrifice is the first principle of his kingdom.

That is what "taking up one's cross" means. Every petty, trivial difficulty is not necessarily a cross. The cross is the life-law of self-denial. It means, Christ-fashion, the crucifixion of self. It puts the world and the word first and self last. They who live to please themselves constitute one great group in human society; and they who live to please God constitute another. The latter, let it be said, learn the secret of conquest which Jesus possessed. By losing life we gain it. Yonder sits a woman who has spent two decades in China. She has passed through the fires of the Boxer persecutions, and the ordeal of separation from family and children. In the world's speech she has "thrown her life away." Actually she has won a character of strength and beauty which makes her shine amid the full hundred other women who are on the same ship with her at the moment. There are a dozen young women here who would give everything to possess her charm and dignity, and poise and sweetness; it came by the Christ law: "Whosoever would save his life shall lose it, and whosoever shall lose his life for my sake shall find it." Well do we mark the emblem of the Redeemer's vicarious sacrifice, "In Hoc Signo Vinces."

TODAY'S FASHION HINT.

THIS SUMMER'S SHIRTWAIST WITH ITS CHANTECLER FRILLS.

While the pleated ruffles which the summer girls wear at the neck, turn downward, those on the sleeve always point upward, and are usually set at the top of a cuff coming just above, or just below the elbow This refined and pretty little marquise blouse of sheer handkerchief linen has a front trimming of Irish crochet and hand embroidery arranged in a new and attractive manner, and the same lace is used to finish the round neck and the cuffs The Chantecler frills are of batiste edged with val lace.

HOME RUN HAGGERTY STORIES ARE OUTDONE

Odd Prank of Ball at Webb Park, Wednesday.

POPS INTO HOLE IN REILLY'S PANT LEG

Entering at Left Knee, Circulates Around into Right Leg and Lodges at Right Knee—It's the Third Strike and Mr. Young, a Lank Gardener, Reaches Second.

Undoubtedly the most peculiar play which ever occurred in the Ohio State league and which is equal to some of the "Home Run Haggerty" tales, happened in the third inning of the first game with Lancaster, Wednesday afternoon.

Outfielder Young, the first batter up in the inning, fanned. The third strike hit on the ground by the plate and Reilly got down to trap the ball. On rising to his feet to pick up the leather, he was surprised to find that it was not in sight. Then came his search for the ball, while Young traveled to first. Reilly danced around, shook his breast protector and felt in his shirt for the lost rawhide. When Young landed on first he saw that Reilly was still looking for the ball, and he made for second.

Reilly then located the ball in his right pants leg, and it was with difficulty that he was able to extract it, his stockings being rolled under with the pants at the knees. When Young was going to take a chance for third, Reilly made a bluff, and the Lank turned back to second. Pitcher Goulait and some of the other players started to his assistance, but before they reached him he managed to extract the pill.

It developed that the ball entered a rip in the left leg of Reilly's pants and circulated to the right leg, lodging above the right knee. The rip was close to the left knee and the hole was but a trifle larger than the ball. Had Young traveled faster on the bases he could easily have landed on third and might possible have scored.

For evening wear the favorite slipper adornment is a large rhinestone or cut steel buckle.

Suits of the Rajah are made on severe lines when they are stylish.

DENIES THAT SHE HAS TAKEN POISON

Until the Hand of Death Is Closing Upon Her

MRS ROBINSON DIES THURSDAY MORNING

Takes Carbolic Acid Wednesday Night—Broods Over Death of Her Mother Three Years Ago and Death of Husband, by Hanging, in August of Last Year

[Rue O July 14—(Special)] Denying absolutely that she had taken poison with suicidal intent until half an hour before her death Mrs William Robinson, aged forty eight years a widow whose husband committed suicide by hanging last August died at the home of her daughter, Mrs Leonard Temple five and a half miles southwest of here this morning at 6 40 o'clock

The unfortunate woman admitted to those about her bedside that she had taken carbolic acid to be out of the way and pointed out to them in her bed underneath the mattresses the bottle containing the poison The poison had been in her possession for over a week according to her statement before her death and he had taken it from a medicine case in the home of her son Otis Robinson while on a visit there at that time

Wednesday evening Mrs Robinson who resides in the home of her daughter Mrs Temple retired up pretty in good spirits and there appeared to be nothing wrong She did not complain being sick, and to all appearances she was in good health According to her confession after having been accused by the physicians who were called of having taken poison she drank the carbolic acid at o'clock a short while after retiring At about 4 o'clock this morning when the members of the family awoke she was heard to be calling for water and assistance was immediately given her She complained that she had been very sick during the night Dr Schutt, of this was sent for and he discovered that her stomach was badly burned and thereupon accused her of having taken poison Dr Clyde Duke of Richwood her family physician was summoned and he too declared that she had taken poison

Mrs Robinson however, strenuously denied having taken any until her case became very serious, and she realized that she was about to die Then she stated had been made at the home of her son not less and it was about that time that her husband committed suicide by hanging himself in a barn west of Richwood

That the poison was diluted with water the belief of the physicians who made an examination this morning, Her mouth was very badly burned although her stomach was not in a serious condition Had the acid not been weakened either from age or dilution death would have ensued sooner A good quantity was taken

Mrs Robinson was a devoted wife and mother and by her many friends in the vicinity in which she lived and the town of Rue it is believed will come as a shock to them She had ever been in good health seemingly She was a cultured woman and had the appearance of being a very young one Up to the time of her suicide she had been in good spirits and last Saturday was in one of the Rue stores with time she appeared well and happy

Aside from her daughter with whom she resided at the time of her death a daughter Mrs William Myers living at Richwood and a son Otis at Essex survive Her father Silas Clark who makes his home with his son Charles three miles southeast of here also survives

It is thought to have been a case of brooding over the death of her mother several years ago and that of her husband

Red Shirt Gets Stranded in Brussels

HIS SQUAW TIRES OF SHOW BUSINESS

Forty Other Braves Also Want To Return

Annie Kills-in-the-Night Thinks She Would Like To Become a Leading Lady, and Red Shirt Help Her To Realize Ambition—Now They Are Stranded in a Foreign Country and Want Help

Washington July 12—Over in Brussels is Red Shirt chief of the Ogallalah Sioux Indians once a big buffalo man among the redskins and no small potato on the Pine Ridge South Dakota police force And with him still Annie Kills In The Night his squaw who is mighty sick and tired of being a leading lady

The plight of Red Shirt is that he is stranded—broke He is thousands of miles off the reservation without a return ticket and forty other Indians with him are blaming Red Shirt for their misfortune Red Shirt cabled the Indian bureau here and officials are hustling around today trying to get Red Shirt and his fellows out of their trouble

It all started when Ethelbert Watts impresario of the redmen vaudeville of London England put both in the winsome bonnet of Annie Kills In The Night urging her to become a leading lady Watts didn't get much encouragement from the male element of Pine Ridge but when he told Annie that he was charmed to know her it was all off and Annie believed every word the man told her So Annie looked up into the eyes of Red Shirt and he gave up his job on the police force and said

Cash Doesn't Come

Come on fellows She wants to go on the stage We'll pack up and go to Brussels

There is an exposition in Brussels and might be a good year but the Brussels have had a touch of Salem and no matter how ferocious with the bark of Ethelbert Watts outside his Wild West show the cash would not come his way

The other day Watts looked at his bank account and his money box reading

Nothing doing Thirty eight helpless Indians turned toward Red Shirt and Red Shirt looked to Annie Kills In The Night Annie it is said told Red Shirt that she would rather be the wife of the chief of police of Pine Ridge than all the leading ladies in the world So Red Shirt cabled home for help

As red posse was made by the syndicate of the Indian office for the safety of the Indians no doubt is expected in getting them safely back to South Dakota

CAPPS RESIGNS FROM BUREAU

Gets a Polite Tip from Secretary Meyer

THEY DISAGREE AS TO THEIR POLICIES

Capps Is in the Service Long Time

This Is Second Dismissal from the Bureau Following Inauguration of Secretary's Reorganization Scheme—Capps Will Retire with Rank of Rear Admiral—Rogers Also Loses His Position

Washington July 12—Rear Admiral W J Capps has resigned as chief of the bureau of construction of the navy department to take effect Aug 1 next when he will have completed 40 years of service and will be eligible for retirement with the rank of rear admiral

The chief constructor's downfall is due to the fact that he is out of sympathy with the reorganization scheme of Secretary of the Navy Meyer and his resignation was requested by the secretary In a letter announcing his retirement from the bureau Mr Capps says frankly that he is not in accord with the secretary on questions of reorganization and that he would prefer to resign

Mr Capps is the second important bureau chief of the department to fall before the Meyer reorganization plan Several weeks ago Paymaster General Rogers resigned after a controversy with Secretary Meyer The paymaster general had failed to obey the order of the secretary to pay the navy supply fund and Mr Meyer promptly dismissed him The retirement of these men from the navy bureaus marks the elimination of the two most important figures in the opposition to the Meyer reorganization plan

Germany Takes Whack at the United States

EMPEROR'S LETTER CAUSE OF TROUBLE

A Second Statement Is Given Out Tuesday

Message Declares Germany Refuses To Recognize Any Right on Part of United States To Supervise Her Diplomatic Relations with Other Countries—Further Developments Awaited

Berlin July 12—Germany today threw the gauntlet to the United States in an official statement issued by the foreign office declaring that Germany intends to do as she pleases in South and Central America if it does without supervision from America

This belligerent message was given to a United States representative after another formal message given out earlier in the day had sought to conciliate the feelings of Americans regarding the Kaiser's attitude to ward President Madriz

The second message was handed to the press representatives at the foreign office with the request that it be given widespread publicity in America No explanation is given as to the wide difference of opinion expressed between the first and second message

The second message said

The Second Message

Germany refuses to recognize any right on the part of the United States to supervise her diplomatic returns with other countries Central and South American countries in general and Nicaragua in particular

Germany's recognition of President Madriz is a matter that concerns herself and Nicaragua, but which concerns no third person or power

The sensational statement is interpreted by some as Germany's first step toward refusing to recognize the Monroe doctrine In the first authorized message of the day the foreign office declared Germany had no dream of creating station in South America adding her desire in the western hemisphere was but to improve her trade relations

This first message was so conciliatory in its tone that it was thought the matter had ended though it was known the temper of the United States had been sorely tried by Kaiser Wilhelm recognition of President Madriz who is persona non grata with America

Much Bustling

After the first message had been given to the press correspondents there was much bustling about in the foreign office a number of the high officials taking part in a secret conference Then the correspondents were summoned again and given the second official statement and notified that it represented Germany's present attitude in the matter

There is a feeling manifested about the foreign office that the American government was presumptuous in making public the Kaiser letter to President Madriz and taking umbrage at Germany's attitude in the matter

Further developments from Washington are awaited with great interest in official circles in Berlin

It is significant that all the government newspapers under the influence of the foreign office tonight received instruction to emphasize Germany's right to maintain any manner of relation she sees fit with Central and South American governments according to her own judgment and without consulting or thinking of the United States in the matter

The Nessische Zeitung a strong government organ in an inspired communication tonight says

Whether or not the United States government or any other government recognizes or refuses to recognize President Madriz is a matter of supreme indifference to the German government

Germany Acts Hastily

Washington July 12—Though Germany's seeming repudiation of the Monroe doctrine is looked upon here, this afternoon, as a matter of the utmost moment It is believed the German foreign office acted

MISS NELLIE BAIN ENTERTAINS MONDAY

Is Hostess to Members of the Elite Club at Her Home on Windsor Street—Miss Isabelle Phillips Entertains Company of Friends at Home of Parents.

About half of the members of the R. S. S. club left the city, Friday morning, on the nine-o'clock car and motored on the Millhouse farm about six and a half miles south of the city. A picnic spread and various outdoor games were enjoyed during the day and the party returned home on the four-o'clock car.

Mrs. L. C. Uhl chaperoned the party, which was composed of Misses Anna Parks, Donna Wadell, Ruth Brockett, Mildred Willis and Grace Bain.

Miss Nellie Bain entertained the members of the Elite club and several visitors at her home on Windsor street, Monday evening. The young women spent a very pleasant time conversing over their art needlework and in the enjoyment of music. During the latter part of the evening the hostess, assisted by her sister, Mrs. Miller, served a delicious course luncheon.

The club arranged to hold a picnic in the near future.

The club guests were Mrs. Miller, of Portland, Oregon; Miss Cora Farnum of Columbus, and Miss Ethel Mather.

LIFE IN A COAL BREAKER

Dark Picture Drawn of Employment to Which Young Boys Are Bound.

Practically every boy graduates from school to the coal breaker before he is fourteen—some boys as early as ten or eleven years. The coal breaker is a gaunt, tower like wooden structure, at the top of which the coal is broken into the required size for use and then sent in a continuous stream down chutes which empty into waiting coal cars or pockets. The boys are employed to pick out of the moving stream the pieces of slate as they appear—straddling the chutes, or sitting on small wooden projections at the side. The atmosphere in the breaker is so thick and dark with flying coal dust that an attempt to take a photograph of a couple of boys at noon, near a window, resulted in one indistinguishable black surface; the noise is so great that I could not distinguish the words of my guide even when he put his mouth close to my ear and shouted; the movement and shaking of the whole structure are at times so violent that in some breakers I have been obliged to hold tightly to a hand rail for safety. The boys grow so cramped from long sitting in one position that sometimes they seize the opportunity to chase one another around the slippery metal platforms. And there was not one superintendent in the four or five collieries that we have happened to visit who did not, upon our questioning, relate at least one tragedy that had occurred in his experience, of a boy who had slipped into a coal pocket and been smothered, or had been mangled and killed by falling into the machinery. When we have asked whether the slate picking could not be done by mechanical devices, the invariable answer has been, "Yes, but the boys are cheaper."—Harper's Magazine.

Advantage of the Blind.

A correspondent, writing on the illiteracy of the native classes, points out a strange anomaly. In devising the "Oriental Braille" alphabet for the use of the Indian blind it was found that the 63 combinations of the six Braille dots will serve to give the blind one code for the whole of the languages and dialects. With this code the Indian blind are being taught, and no difficulty has arisen in any vernacular. The ordinary native blessed with sight is more unfortunate. The complicated nature of the native syllabaries is such that it requires from 500 to 1,000 sorts of type to print a book even in simple language. Originally the letters of Asoka were simple in form, but the modern varieties of Asoka's letters have become elaborate and complicated.—Allahabad Pioneer.

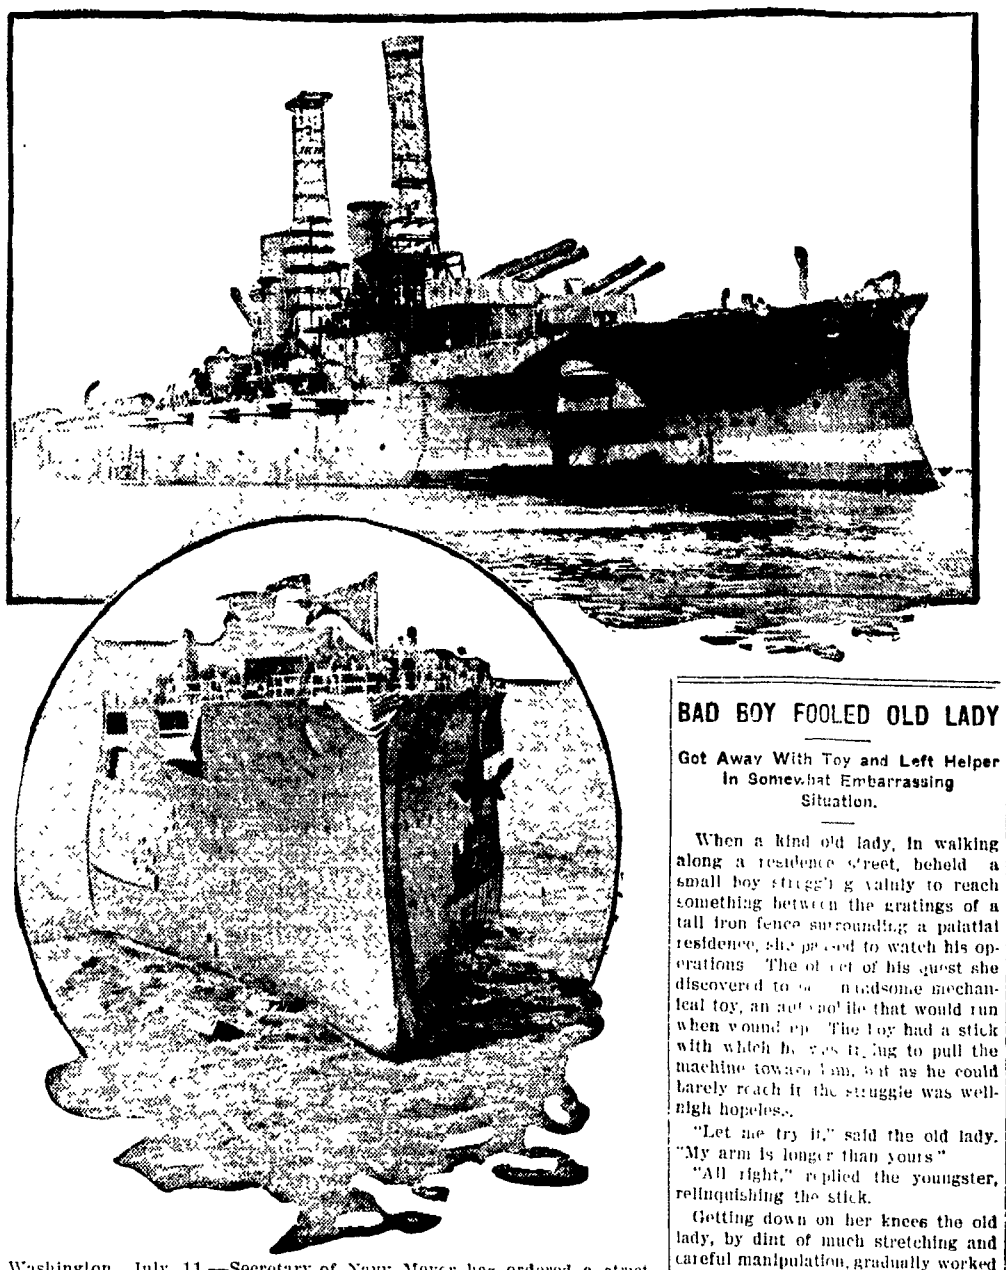
DEFECTIVE ARMOR PLATES ON TWO AMERICAN DREADNAUGHTS START A STRICT INVESTIGATION BY SECRETARY OF NAVY



Washington, July 11.—Secretary of Navy Meyer has ordered a strict investigation into defective armor plate on the Dreadnaughts, North Dakota and Utah. News of the startling discovery become public as the result of a protracted conference held at the navy department. The revelation is the more sensational because the North Dakota, which is the greatest and fastest warship afloat, is already in commission. The Utah, which is still building at Camden, New Jersey, is to exceed even the North Dakota in enormous dimensions. Naval experts find small comfort in the fact that the defective plates on the North Dakota have already been replaced at the Charlestown, Massachusetts, navy yard, where the great battleship was recently placed in commission, after a record-breaking trial trip from the yards of her builders, the Fore River Shipbuilding company, at Quincy, Massachusetts. The conference was over the legal phases involved—the cost of replacing the armor and the responsibility. Present at the important gathering were representatives of the New York Shipbuilding company, which is building the Utah; the Midvale Steel company, which has supplied armor for many American warships, and a number of government experts.

BAD BOY FOOLED OLD LADY

Got Away With Toy and Left Helper In Somewhat Embarrassing Situation.

When a kind old lady, in walking along a residence street, beheld a small boy struggling vainly to reach something between the gratings of a tall iron fence surrounding a palatial residence, she paused to watch his operations. The object of his quest she discovered to be a handsome mechanical toy, an automobile that would run when wound up. The boy had a stick with which he was trying to pull the machine toward him, but as he could barely reach it the struggle was well-nigh hopeless.

"Let me try it," said the old lady. "My arm is longer than yours."

"All right," replied the youngster, relinquishing the stick.

Getting down on her knees the old lady, by dint of much stretching and careful manipulation, gradually worked the machine toward the fence and at last had the satisfaction of seeing the little boy grasp it with eager fingers.

"Now," she said, "you must be more careful and not let it get away with you again."

"Gee," said the boy, "it never got away from me, an' it ain't goin' to neither."

"Wh-wh-why," faltered the old lady with the dawning of a horrible suspicion. "Isn't it yours?"

"You bet it's mine now," said the kid and away he scampered, leaving the good old lady alone with her conscience.

CHINA IN STATE OF DECAY

Ruin Seen Everywhere, and No Attempt Made to Stay the Ravages of Time.

"Along the road—and this is characteristic—nothing is being repaired," writes the Peking correspondent of the London Times. "It is the national failing to spend nothing on repairs, to build and then leave the building to fall gradually into decay and ruin. Nor is anything cleaned, and the squalor that is a feature even of the imperial palace in Peking is most extraordinary. A few miles out of Honantu there is a fine stone bridge of five arches; but the piers are falling away, the parapet has disappeared, and the flagstones with which it is paved have great gaps and hollows, so that the cart rumbles and crashes and bumps across it in a way that would break any but a Chinese springless cart. To repair is no one's business."

At another stage of his journey he remarks: "Perhaps to some extent the anticipated coming of a railway, which will kill the present cart traffic, may account for the shocking condition of the native inns. With railway extension in the air, there is no inducement for the innkeeper to spend money on the upkeep of his hovel. Nothing is repaired; their filth and squalor are amazing. In the inn yard the well has its mouth below the level of the soil, so that water which is spilt may flow back into the well and carry with it the surface drainage.

"A doctor must notice the prevalence of consumption. To the universal habit of expectoration on the floor, the exclusion of air, and the absence of drainage this prevalence must be due."

The Cheapest Seat.

Here is the latest joke from the British metropolis: "The country visitor was doing London and went to a well known concert hall. He was particular to inquire the price of seats and the obliging attendant said: 'Front seats, two shillings; back, one shilling; program, a penny.' 'Oh, well, then,' blandly replied the countryman, 'I'll sit on a program.'"

Consider the Trees.

The trees are lovely in summer; so are the women. But how different are the women and the trees as to their clothes! To be sure, both are delightfully clothed; yet, with the abundant raiment with which the trees are supplied, they require but one trunk to hold it all.—Smart Set.

NEEDS OF BACKWARD CHILD

Moral Awakening Comes After All His Physical Defects Have Been Removed.

The greatest need of the average backward child, after his physical defects have been removed and his body given a decent chance to develop, is a moral awakening, says Rheta Childe Dorr in the course of an article describing the public school work for backward children, in Hampton's Magazine. Virtually all such children are selfish, passionate and malicious. They love to destroy. They love to inflict pain. They delight in disturbing the order of a classroom. Almost always are they untruthful, and very frequently are they thievish.

Why not? They live in a state of constant struggle with the world—an unequal struggle in which their miserable little souls are daily and hourly crucified. Around them is a world of normal children who learn easily things beyond the power of the backward to acquire; who are praised and loved and rewarded. In the playground the backward children enviously watch the others perform feats of strength and skill. Sometimes the dullard or the handicapped child tries to break into a game or a contest and is pushed aside or chased away by the strong. A child not feeble minded but merely dull and on that account behind the procession resents with a bitterness not to be comprehended this constant pushing aside. Exactly like a rat fighting for life in a corner he strikes back viciously, desperately.

Far more than their brains the emotional natures of such children need cultivation. Far more important than learning to read is learning to love and trust. Vices of temperament must be unlearned, bad habits must be overcome, a whole garden full of weeds must be cleared away before the soil is ready for planting. After that the task is not fraught with serious difficulties.

Origin of Christening Ships.

The ceremony of christening ships is a survival of a barbaric custom when sacrifices were made to the gods, and some living victim or offering was held up and its throat cut so that the blood flowed over the prow of the ship being launched. The vessel was baptized in warm blood. Now sprinkling wine or pure water is used, and the change has many advantages, though the symbolism remains.

In sleeping keep the head as low as posible, so that the blood may have unimpeded circulation.

OLD AIDS TO THE HAT TRADE

Severe Laws Have Been Passed In England to Protect Various Makers of Headgear.

Hats have in England been subject to very severe protective enactments. The blocked beaver hat, for instance, imported by Sir Walter Raleigh from the low countries, won its way so rapidly that in 1571 Queen Elizabeth passed an act to protect the making of "thrummed" caps made from wool for the advantage of the landed proprietors, whose sheep furnished the material. The statute provided that "every person, except ladies and Jews (why were Jews excused?) shall on Sundays and holidays wear on his head a cap of velvet wool made in England. Penalty 3s. 6p. per day." About a century later the law, for which there is nothing too high or too low, having taxed men's shoes, turned its attention once more to their hats, and soon put a check on all improvements in the trade by requiring every vender of hats to take out a license under a heavy penalty. Subsequently a stamp duty was imposed on all hats, which were officially marked inside where the maker's name now appears. The penalty for selling a hat without a stamp was £10, and the penalty for forging a hat stamp was—death! Whence no doubt, the modern custom of the man who goes to church, sits down, looks into his hat—to read his maker's name!

THROWS DOWN THE GAUNTLET

either hastily or eagerly in issuing its statement regarding the Madriz letter. It was pointed out by the state department that officially the Kaiser's letter to Madriz had been simply regarded as a formal communication and not in the light of an attempt on the part of Germany to invade the diplomatic field of the United States in Central America.

Germany's declaration that she does not regard the United States as being entitled to any special function of supervision over Central America and South American affairs is certain to attract most careful official consideration.

The declaration is regarded here as verging upon a flat denial of the Monroe doctrine and if Germany attempts to put into practice the prerogatives she thus claims, it is believed that trouble is almost certain to follow.

Apparently the German foreign office has made the mistake of assuming that the state department had officially criticized its action. The state department had not referred to the Kaiser's letter. The document was made public from other sources.

Magnifying Trouble.

It is believed that the action of Germany will have the effect of magnifying what had been looked upon as a tempest in a teapot, to a matter of serious and far-reaching proportions. It offers a basis for the sentiment already expressed that a decided Anti-American feeling is being displayed by Germany.

The Madriz letter was made public here by friends of Madriz. It is understood that it was published some time ago in Managua, as Madriz wished to give wide publicity to the apparent expression of friendliness from the Kaiser.

Though a copy of the letter was in the hands of the state department here, no official statement of any kind was made regarding it.

The action of Germany is in marked contrast with that of Great Britain. When England considered the recognition of Madriz, she formally inquired what attitude the United States would take. When informed that this country would not recognize Madriz, England postponed the matter indefinitely.

Germany, however, proceeded without reference to the United States and the declaration, today, makes it plain that the Kaiser had no intention of considering the attitude of the United States at all.

The First Message.

Berlin, July 12.—The United Press representative here is authorized by the German foreign office to transmit the following official statement regarding yesterday's despatches from Washington to the effect that Kaiser Wilhelm was suspected there of meddling in the affairs of South and Central America:

"The emperor is always most careful to avoid wounding the susceptibility of America in regard to Central and South American countries.

"Germany pursues solely commercial aims in the western hemisphere, and does not dream of coaling stations there. Germany does not meddle in the politics of different countries.

"Kaiser Wilhelm's letter to President Madriz was the customary diplomatic acknowledgment of the emperor's intimation that he, Madriz, had assumed the office of president.

"The phrase 'great and good friend,' to which umbrage is taken, is invariably used by monarchs in writing to presidents of republics. The letter sent by his majesty to President Madriz is almost identical in wording to the letter sent by his majesty to President Gomez when the latter became president of the Venezuelan republic. We can not understand this fuss unless it is deliberately stirred up for the purpose of creating dissension between Germany and the United States."

prominent in politics, and was a most enthusiastic Republican. Although often honored by his party by being named as a candidate for various county offices, he was never elected to office. Bright, jovial and sterling all the way through, it was alike a pleasure and an honor to know "Uncle Jerry" Ellmaker.

The deceased was a member of the Waldo lodge of Odd Fellows, and also was a member of the Baptist church at that place and was quite active in the work.

JAMES D. DE WOLFE DIES IN COLUMBUS

He Falls a Victim to Tuberculosis Sunday.

REMAINS WERE BROUGHT TO MARION FOR BURIAL

Jimmy DeWolfe Is Known the Country Over as a Result of the Various Press Positions He Has Held—In Advance of Big Shows and Stage Stars.

The following clipping from the Ohio State Journal tells of the death of James Denton DeWolfe, well known here, where he has many friends and relatives:

After lingering at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James De Wolfe, No. 163 south Eighteenth street, since last September, James Denton De Wolfe died Sunday from tuberculosis. "Jimmie," as he was known to hundreds and thousands of persons from coast to coast, began his career as a Columbus newspaper man and concluded it as one of the best-known circus advance men in the world. He was only thirty-six at the time of his death.

Besides the parents, a sister, Mrs. T. R. Allen, of Marion, and a brother, Fred C. De Wolfe of this city, survive. Funeral services will be held at 1:30 Tuesday afternoon, at St Paul's Episopal church, after which the body will be taken to Marion for burial arriving at 4:20 and being taken directly to Marion cemetery.

James De Wolfe served an apprenticeship on the various newspapers of Columbus and Cleveland before starting out as a press agent. For three years he was ahead of the Sells brothers' circus, in the days of that organization's greatest glory. He started this work in 1895. Later he was in advance of prominent stars, among them being De Wolfe Hopper, Blanche Walsh and others. Then he went to the Barnum & Bailey circus. After a season with that organization he became the general press agent for the Keith & Proctor vaudeville intersts in New York City.

The seeds of tuberculosis had already fastened themselves upon him, and he gave up this work to resume road service with the Ringling brothers, in the hope that it would benefit his health. He kept up the plucky fight for almost a year, but decreasing strength forced him to quit at the end of September last From then on he kept up a cheerful courage although his doctors held out no hope.

On the recent appearance in this city of the Ringling circus a carriage was sent for the sick man and he became the guest of the entire organization and was almost carried about on a pillow.

Cook in Comfort

You no longer need wear yourself out with the weakening heat of an intensely hot kitchen. You can cook in comfort.

Here is a stove that gives no outside heat. All its heat is concentrated at the burners. An intense blue flame (hotter than either white or red) is thrown upwards but not around. All the heat is utilized in cooking — none in outside heating.

New Perfection
WICK BLUE FLAME
Oil Cook-stove

entirely removes the discomfort of cooking. Apply a match and immediately the stove is ready. Instantly an intense heat is projected upwards against the pot, pan, kettle or boiler, and yet there is no surrounding heat — no smell — no smoke.

Cautionary Note: Be sure you get this stove—see that the name-plate reads "New Perfection."

Why? Because The New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove is scientifically and practically perfect. You cannot use too much wick—it is automatically controlled. You get the maximum heat—no smoke. The burner is simple. One wipe with a cloth cleans it—consequently there is no smell.

The New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove is wonderful for year-round use, but especially in summer. Its heat operates upward to pan, pot, or kettle, but not beyond or around. It is useless for heating a room.

It has a Cabinet Top with shelf for keeping plates and food hot.

It has long turquoise-blue enamel chimneys. The nickel finish, with the bright blue of the chimneys, makes the stove ornamental and attractive. Made with 1, 2 and 3 burners; the 2 and 3-burner stoves can be had with or without Cabinet.

COACHED AT A COURTING

By HARRY VAN AMBERG

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association

It was an afternoon in August. I was sitting on the Polands' piazza overlooking the ocean. Mrs. Poland was lounging beside me in a wicker chair. She is a good friend of mine. Mrs. Poland, although her husband and I were chums before they were married. She has never been at all jealous of me—something unusual in such cases. She invites me to her cottage every summer and is good enough to say that she would not consider a party complete without me.

I tell her I'm never complete without a party.

Mrs. Poland has a hobby. It is matchmaking. She tried to match me several times and always failed. The reason, she said, was that I did not understand women.

"I have a girl for you," she said.

"I thought you had given me up."

"I have so far as your management is concerned. This time I wish you to leave your part of the affair to me."

"Now you're getting down to something practical. Who is the lady?"

"She comes tomorrow—Miss Annabel Vail. She is pretty, intelligent, stylish and has some means of her own, though not much."

"Very well. So long as you keep me instructed I'll do anything you like. But be it understood that I'm to have no headwork to do on my own account. You understand?"

"Perfectly."

Miss Vail arrived as expected. She was all Mrs. Poland had claimed for her. On the afternoon of her arrival Mrs. Poland informed me that she expected me to drive with her guest. The carriage would be at the door at 4 o'clock. I told her I would be charmed to drive with Miss Vail if she thought the young lady could endure me without other company. We drove two hours and returned in time to dress for dinner. During the evening Mrs. Poland asked me how I liked Miss Vail, and I told her I had been much pleased.

"I doubt it," she said. "A man who is much pleased with a woman can find plenty to say to her. Miss Vail has told me that you didn't say anything but 'Yes' and 'No.'"

"I was always a good listener."

A sailing party was arranged for a day's outing on the water in Poland's yacht. Mrs. Poland instructed me before starting to devote myself almost exclusively to Miss Vail. My motto was "obey orders if you break owners." Miss Vail was very seasick, and I escorted her to the side of the vessel and held her head. She motioned me away, but I clung to the job. Then, when she sank back into a reclining chair, considering that she was ill I concluded that I must do all the talking myself. I talked till she told me if I would only go away and let her alone she would feel much relieved.

Mrs. Poland that evening told me very impatiently that I didn't know how to make myself agreeable to a girl, but it was impossible for any one to teach me.

"Haven't I done all you have told me to do?" I asked, very much crestfallen.

"Goodness gracious, do you expect your coach to follow you about to tell you when to talk and when to keep silent? Must you be worked like the figures in a Punch and Judy show?"

"From what you say Miss Vail has not been especially impressed with me."

"I wouldn't say so, except that it is all up with your suit, but she says you're the most aggravating man she ever met."

"Can't we wipe off the slate and begin all over?"

"You'd be the same"—

"Idiot?"

Mrs. Poland was silent. She was scolding me as she would scold one of her own children whom she dearly loved. There was nothing more to be said by either of us, so we dropped the subject.

Bridge was the game for the evening, and in order to show Mrs. Poland that I was willing to do all in my power to meet her wishes I invited Miss Vail to be my partner. She was very stupid at cards, and when she trumped my tricks, although I said nothing, I could not help looking grave. This she interpreted as condemnation and after finishing a rubber arose and left the table. Mrs. Poland was watching us and as soon as we were alone said to me:

"What did you scold her for?"

"Scold her! I didn't say a word."

"But you looked it."

I was discouraged. I made no reply.

"You'll never win that girl in the world. You needn't try any more to please me. I give it up."

The next day Mrs. Poland was very cross with me. I asked her if I had offended further. She said that I had not, but Miss Vail was so offended with me that she was intending to cut short her visit.

"That's too bad," I replied. "Not for the world would I consent to remain your guest after having driven a guest of yours from your house. I beg of you tell Miss Vail that it is I who am going. Let her remain."

"Oh, tell her yourself. I'm tired of the business."

I invited Miss Vail to go down on the beach with me. We remained there all the morning. When we returned Mrs. Poland asked:

"Which is to go?"

"Neither," I replied. "We're engaged."

The Game of War and the Game of Chess

By SADIE MARSH

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association

A contempt for death is the main cause of the triumph of the diminutive Japanese over the largest (territorially and numerically) nation of Europe.

One of the Japanese leaders of the insurrection against the emperor of Japan in 1873 was Count Saigo. The revolt was a failure, and toward the close the count was shut up in his fortress, the enemy slowly but surely surrounding it and cutting off every avenue of escape. At last it was evident to the count that the capture of his castle was but a question of time and he knew that when that time came his head would be stricken from his body. Then the leader retired to the living rooms with a party of his most intimate associates and, calling for his chessboard, sat down for a game.

He had played but a few minutes when a messenger from one of his lieutenants came hurrying in with the news that the enemy had captured an important outpost. The count simply bowed his head to indicate that he had heard the message and understood the situation; then he went on with the game.

There were a number of lookers on criticising the play, rallying the players when a bad move was made, chaffing one another, laughing, gossiping evidently unmindful that an enemy was closing in upon them, and when the castle was captured many if not all of them would be put to the sword. As if the game stood for that more important battle going on outside, Count Saigo's king was gradually being driven into a corner.

"Check!" said his adversary.

The count took one of his adversary's unimportant pieces, thus delaying temporarily the final catastrophe.

Another messenger came in and said:

"The enemy have captured the round tower of the west angle. This puts him in possession of the angle, and he is now scaling the inner wall with ladders."

Again the count nodded his head politely to indicate that he had heard and that the messenger might consider himself dismissed. Then, dropping his eyes again upon the chessboard, he said quietly:

"Your move."

His adversary replied by taking one of Count Saigo's castles.

So the game went on. In different parts of the room groups were amusing themselves, chatting, telling stories, laughing. No one entering the apartment without a knowledge of the enemy's presence without would have dreamed that these men were being gradually closed in upon and that within a short time the heads of most of them would be rolling on the ground.

"The enemy have scaled the outer walls on the east and are pouring down into the moat. They will soon be on the inner wall, from which they may drop into the court."

This was the report of the third messenger. The count gave him the same imperturbable dismissal, this time with his hand on his knight while studying whether to make a move with it.

"A check!" he said as he took up his piece and put it down in another square.

"The enemy are dropping into the court at the west angle," said another messenger, "but our men are making a good fight there."

The count's opponent moved out of check, leaving his adversary in a worse position than before. From this point the count's king was being gradually surrounded, and an expert at chess could see a sure defeat in a given number of moves. The game interested the players and the lookers-on; but, judging from appearances, that dreadful game outside was of no importance to them. And yet they knew that in a given number of successive moves sure to come they would be at the mercy of their enemies, and for rebels there was no mercy.

"The enemy are climbing the walls in every direction!" cried the last messenger who was destined to carry news of the successes of the emperor's troops.

A checkmate for Count Saigo was sure to occur within two moves. They were made and the game was finished. Rising, the count said:

"Gentlemen, now it is time."

Those about waited in deference to their leader, who said to one standing beside him:

"My sword bearer."

There was a pause in the conversation. The jests, the laughter, every sound within the room, ceased. Without the yells of the enemy, breaking through opposing obstacles, were loud and fierce. Not a man inside moved or not a countenance displayed any agitation. All waited respectfully for their leader to take such action as he deemed proper.

Then the sword bearer appeared, and all understood what the count's action would be. In a low tone he instructed the sword bearer to do the work which, unless done by his own order, would surely be done by that of the leaders of the victorious troops. The count kneeled, clasping his hands behind his back. Every one understood what was about to be done, but there was no protest, no suggestion that such a course might be avoidable.

Then the sword bearer swung his weapon in the air, it descended, and Count Saigo's head rolled on the floor.

"What's that?" asked the L. and M.

"I made a pumpkin pie yesterday," Ruth answered timidly.

He looked the confection with a knife and fork, but could not make headway and was about to desist himself when Ruth announced:

"I have another in the pantry, dear. You sister sent one over yesterday."

She produced the second pie, which was as tender and appetizing as the first had been tough and unsavory.

WHAT WAS ON THE HOOK?

By MARY RUTH TRUESDALE

When Samuel Atterbury died and left his son Isaac his sole heir the young man was twenty seven years old. He did not inherit the miserly qualities of his father. He was a quiet fellow and longed for a home, something his father had considered himself too poor to give him. Isaac had not lived the life of a gentleman and had no idea of meeting and courting a lady for a wife. He desired to marry, but had sufficient sense to understand that he would be the target for designing women. His father had scarcely been laid to rest before Isaac was the recipient of a basketful of offers from young women who were anxious to marry him. He read every one of them, thinking that he might see something by which he might detect genuine good sense, the faculty he most desired in a wife. He did find one that impressed him with its guilelessness. A girl who gave her name as Blanche Tyron and her age as eighteen said that some of her friends were putting in applications for his hand and she had concluded to do the same, not that she had any hope of getting the situation, but her mother who was an invalid and whom she supported, had urged her to do so. She sent with her letter her photograph. There was such honest innocence in the face that Isaac was impressed.

Isaac did not reply to her letter, but a few weeks later he appeared at her home as an agent for a sewing machine company and insisted on selling her a machine. The girl looked longingly at the machine, for she earned her living by her needle and needed a new machine sadly. She regretted that she could not afford to buy it and was turning away when the agent made her a proposition so favorable that she stopped to think. When a woman hesitates with a salesman at the door she is lost. The agent, without waiting for her to make up her mind, removed the machine from the wagon to the house. Then he filled in the necessary blanks, and before the girl knew what she was about she had signed them.

Isaac had made the installments to be paid weekly on each Saturday night. When the first payment came due he appeared about 8 o'clock in the evening. Blanche had the money ready for him, but instead of going away he lingered to talk with her. The next Saturday evening when he came for payment of the note he stopped longer. Indeed, his visits grew more and more extended and the relations between the two more tender. Some time before the last installments were due Isaac one evening when he called to collect tore up the notes and left her the possessor of the machine. Blanche's gratitude kindled love, and not long after this when Isaac proposed under the name of Nathan Griggs she accepted him.

She had scarcely given her word when the postman called and handed her an answer to the offer of marriage she had made the multimillionaire several months before. He informed her that on receiving her letter and her picture he had taken pains to learn something about her, had seen her and had been so favorably impressed with her that he had decided to give her the situation of wife to him.

Here was a situation of another kind. Blanche had a few days before accepted a sewing machine agent, and now comes an offer of marriage from a multimillionaire.

Blanche fortunately received the letter when her mother was upstairs and knew nothing about it. Blanche took it up to her own room and hid it in her bureau drawer, saying nothing about it to her mother, whom she knew would give her no peace till she had broken with the sewing machine agent and accepted the multimillionaire. Isaac called that evening. He expected to find his betrothed in at least a state of uncertainty and had but little doubt that he would receive his dismissal. He found Blanche in no different condition than usual, except that the greeting kiss she gave him was a trifle more affectionate.

Isaac passed the evening expecting every moment that the letter would be mentioned, but when he arose to go and nothing had been said about it he began to wonder. He had stood behind a tree on the opposite side of the street and seen the postman hand Blanche a letter and knew that it was his, for he had purposely put it in a pink envelope. He had come expecting Blanche to tell him of her offer.

The next day Isaac received a letter from Blanche in answer to his proposal, stating that since her letter to him she had received a similar offer from one who loved her and whom she loved and that it would not be honorable nor could she bear to disappoint him. She must therefore beg him to excuse her.

Isaac on receipt of this letter remarked to himself, "Since she is so reticent over her affairs I will practice some reticence myself." As the wedding day approached he told her that his straitened circumstances would require a very modest wedding and since he had no house of his own to take her to they must remain in her own home.

The marriage took place in her modest abode, after which her husband drove her to a handsome residence. She did not know till then that instead of capturing a sewing machine agent she had captured a multimillionaire.

Glenn H. Curtiss on his Flight from Albany to New York

Louis Paulhan

Cragg K. Hamilton Receiving his Pilot Before New York Flight

Charles S. Rolls English Aviator

Up to a few months ago the European cables daily conveyed word of some daring feat accomplished on the other side of the water by one of the many aviators then contesting. Nearly all of these had to do with the more spectacular side of the sport such as soaring aloft or circling the sun on folds so many times at this and that altitude. There was little or nothing of the practical side of the sport shown but each event chronicled and paved the way for the slower surer and more practical contests on this side of the water. While their foreign cousins were encircling fields and the pundits of the crowned heads and their worshipers a handful of aviators and their mechanicians were hard at work ever here perfecting their machines for the more rigid tests that were soon to follow.

When word came however that Louis Blériot had flown across the English Channel then the Yankees awoke with a start. They realized that unless they made their stunt they would soon be outstripped. Many of the more successful demonstrations got together at Hempstead Plains on Long Island and after duplicating all the feats their foreign rivals had accomplished they set out for straight away flights. But before they had accomplished any flight worthy of mention the aides again announced another achievement that gave them a shock. Charles Stewart Rolls not only flew across the English Channel, but, after encircling Sangatte Cliffs on the outskirts of Calais he made the return trip without a stop and alighted at Dover his starting point.

The startling influence came so close upon the heels of the wonderful feat that Louis Paulhan made from London to Manchester a distance of 185 miles and return thereby the $5000 prize offered by the London Mail that it threw the Americans into a fine bordering on panic. Put only a few days elapsed before Glenn Curtiss arose and stretching his wings flew from Albany to New York a distance of 150 miles. It seemed as though the Philadelphia flight and every day since then aviation history has been made.

The years 1909 and 1910 will go down in history as those in which the many Blériots, the first real and practical start in the English that which baffled their forefathers for generations. His try tells us that dreams is true. It is the sixteenth century but spent their talents in trying to evade me the laws of the air. But only in the last year or two has real progress been made in the fascinating sport. Hundreds of the minds of the world were quick to realize what an important airships could be to men on water and the many it held were hereby prompted by the aims of Mars. The tests held at Fort Myer Va. and later at College Point L. I. which is now headquarters for the United States Army's aeronautic department went far toward stimulating and rousing interest in the sport and now the fever is reached such heat proportions that the school children through this land of ours as well as their hand it perfect models that fly.

The public exhibition of New York city have turned out some really meritorious machines and many of these have been patented. They will shortly be converted into practical flying machines and it is my will from what it is predicted that airships will be almost as numerous in the next decade as automobiles are today.

In tracing the various flights of the aviators of the world in the past year or so it might be well to begin with Latham and his English Channel flight. This up to that time July 5 1909 was by all odds the most spectacular. The feat was duplicated by Jacques de Lesseps and Count Ferdinand de Lesseps in the Suez Canal. Delagrange however came to grief and several times he fell into the water but the timely assistance of Farman he would not be living today to boast of his performance.

Hubert Latham the Frenchman a distance of twenty-six miles in a little less than half an hour. His average speed was about 25 miles an hour but at times he flew at the rate of sixty miles an hour. He remained in the air for an average altitude of 1,000 feet for ten minutes he was out of sight of the English or French coasts although the aviator had to overcome the still afterwards was in failing. The start he said was a mistake but after he had collected steam through a fifteen mile an hour breeze he was all right. He was followed by a fleet of vessels of the French Navy but he was out of sight for all practical purposes. Latham's machine consisted of two planes each 50 feet long and 6 feet wide. The total distance covered was 154 miles. The highest altitude reached was made in forty minutes. The total time for the round trip was one hour and thirty-five minutes. He took full possession of the machine, his landing at the end of the flight. It is said Walter Upton while Latham used a machine designed by himself.

Every question Hamilton starts bold by full as the most daring aviator who ever operated a flying machine in this or any other country. The speech out in above the earth completely thrilled the crowds that fully witnessed his every move at Hempstead Plains and even later at Nyack. Fear Nothing seems to daunt him and he doesn't know the meaning of the word fear. He differs in this respect from Curtiss who plans every move with the utmost care. His evolution is all mapped out before he leave the earth while Hamilton does whatever fancy dictate what shall.

Several weeks ago while flying over Hempstead Plains Hamilton saw what an attitude of several hundred feet and headed the aviation post. Then without a second's warning he shut off his engine and made a flight dive to earth. When within a few feet of the ground he twisted his planes and his machine turned along the field like a swallow. Then it rose again until he had reached his original altitude. Then he made another flight dive to earth flown at all but with perfect ease and precision. It is such feats as that that have secured for him the title of Dare Devil for that most certainly he is.

The aeroplane has taken such a firm hold on the people of this country that many wealthy men and women are racing in for the sport in earnest. Miss Lilian Bethel Todd has entered the list as a competitor in several big distance flights and she has her machine hangars at Mineola where she keeps the machines she designed. She has made several flights and has learned to manipulate her planes and can turn in mid-air. Anthony C. Drexel Jr. son of the multi-millionaire banker

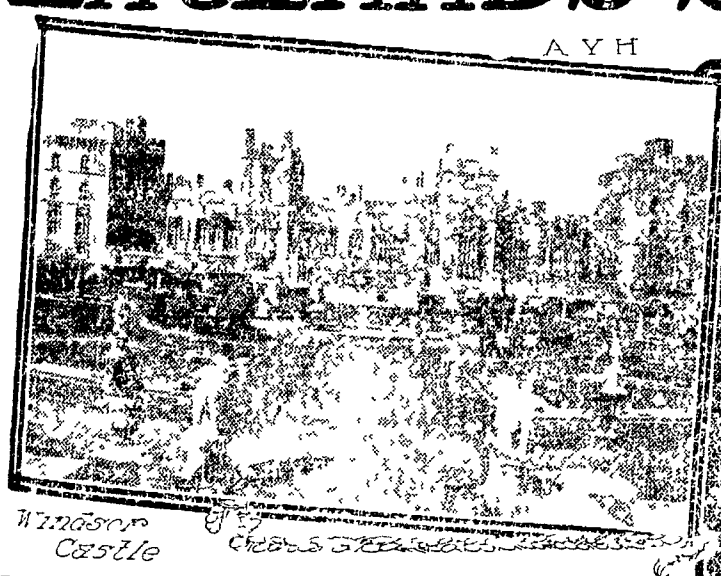
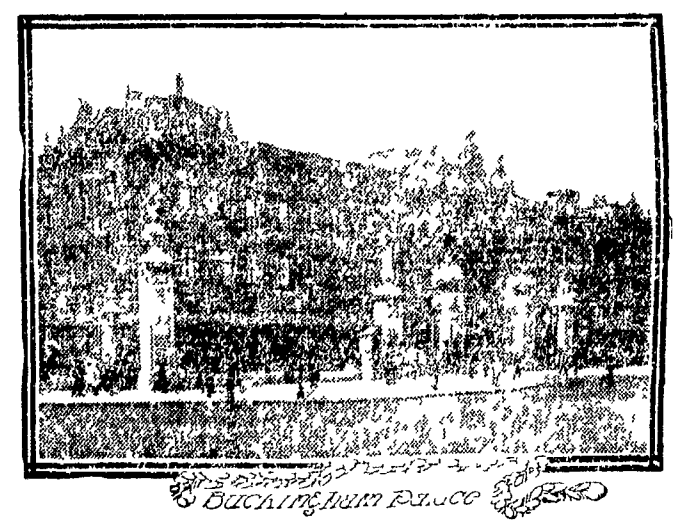
ENGLAND'S SAILOR KING



Windsor Castle

George V and His Family



Buckingham Palace

When the death of Edward VII and the advent of George V upon the royal and historic thrones of England and of the Indian Empire the greatest naval power in history has for the first time in several generations a monarch who has been and is a professional sailor.

Just what this means to a nation whose proud boast is that Britannia rules the waves can be better understood by realizing the fact that the present era is absolutely the period of greatest expenditure for warships in the history of the race. Also despite the efforts to limit armaments the naval programs of England and the other great powers are going on steadily increasing.

Began at the Bottom.

Of course England's new king like every other first class monarch is admiral in several different grades a field marshal of the German Empire a general in the Austrian army and holds naval and military rank in every European state of consequence. But it is the fact that King George served as a common cadet every British naval cadet away back in 1877 aboard the old fashioned warship Britannia that has stirred the most enthusiasm among his subjects.

At that period he was not heir apparent a station held by the king's eldest son. The Duke of Clarence until the sad death in 1892 and King George served through all the various lower grades of the British navy. He was made a lieutenant in 1879 and sublieutenant in 1884 and gained another step in another year and became a full fledged lieutenant in his grandmother's (Queen Victoria's navy.

It took 10 years of active service before Prince George got a ship of his own. It is said that was not because favored that any other hard working seaman for like duty would get it but rather because the Duke of Clarence died. The 79 was a 1,580 ton vessel 187 feet long and the first ship of the British fleet specially built for the purpose so that in full weather it shipped quantities of salt water.

Messed With His Gunner.

Here the sailor king was compelled to eat canned sardines with his only messmate the gunner of the torpedo boat. King George was no fair weather sailor. He lost all his kit of clothing and spare cash with her during one of the early storms of the cruise as well as many of them.

Moreover in his quiet bulldog way England's future ruler has showed courage at times when the best of sailors feel that dangers thronged thick and fast about them.

It was in 1880 that young Prince George after leaving the Britannia was in training to become a full fledged commissioned officer put into battle duty as midshipman on the Canada a new two mast and funnel gunboat. The ship was ordered to the China station and while on the way there the Canada was run down in the fog by the steamer Atlanta. The Canada was struck amidships on the port side and sank in a few minutes. Fortunately the Atlanta was not badly damaged and was able to stand by and rescue the officers and men of the Canada. Prince George was one of the last to leave the sinking ship. He was in the water for some time before he was picked up by a boat from the Atlanta.

A Stickler For Duty.

And this incident is typical of her son now King. Edward and Kings and Emperors of the earth and mightiest combination of nations empires and dominions of every race color language and religion under the sun—holds good to this day. George is a quiet lad but he never shirks.

He's a stickler for duty and woe to the official military or civil, who presumes on the quiet manner of his new monarch to go counter to regular orders or in the regular course of her royal functions to decorate British seamen officers and men all of for heroism at sea. No one was more surprised than she when she found herself confronted by her own German husband who by leave of the admiralty was to publicly thanked by the sovereign. The Queen was spoiled but she not only thanked her husband but gave him a hearty kiss right in the view of the young fellow who was just blushed purple. The late King Edward then Prince of Wales next day congratulated the boy without effusion and told the lad's mother now the Queen Mother.

George is a quiet lad, but he never shirks." was the lady's comment. But it took 10 years of active service before Prince George got a ship of his own.

It was not until three months later that Queen Victoria heard of her grandson's heroism. The Queen was called on to present the man who was saved by the hero and decorated by Prince as Duke of Cornwall and York.

A Stickler For Duty

And this incident is typical of her son now King. Edward and Kings and Emperors of the earth and mightiest combination of nations empires and dominions of every race color language and religion under the sun—holds good to this day. George is a quiet lad but he never shirks.

He's a stickler for duty and woe to the official military or civil, who presumes on the quiet manner of his new monarch to go counter to regular orders or of the torpedo boat that in the rush what they were coming down to what sort of ship he kept. But when the Victoria and Albert got to Spithead amidst the roaring of mighty salutes from the huge British ironclads they looked around in vain for Prince Albert and torpedo boat 79. That young man had other orders and was off for an unsteady gale with heavy seas washing over into his 10 foot square cabin.

The next afternoon 79 got in port with the rest of the squadron and the Empress and Prince Louis went aboard. Orders ashore was all Prince George had sent the latter expostulations of the Empress of Russia with fast speed killed the Emperor of Germany that the impressed seaman the youth much to the great discomfiture of the quiet tempered and always dignified Prince Louis and as soon as he got back to Germany he sent him the highest decoration the gift of the Teutonic crown.

Has Difficult Position.

So the strongest characteristic of England's new king is his reserve allied to tireless sense of duty not had qualities to help especially a new ruler in a country as much upset politically as the United Kingdom is at present. If the King Edward was a diplomat of extraordinary ability or talents but many of them superlatively the latter it is said to be the best possible points in his favor.

King George V has none of this and in connection many smiles at the man have already been made at his expense. Yet the world knows full well that the King is not a fool. He is a man of affairs and a thinker. He is not afraid to have his own opinions and express them. He is a man of the times. He is a man of the people. He is a man of the world. He is a man of the times. He is a man of the people. He is a man of the world. He is a man of the times. He is a man of the people. He is a man of the world.

Of course the ordinary facts of the new King's life are on printed records everywhere and it is those more intimate little things not widely known that after all can give some worthy ideal of the new and powerful personality that has entered on so great a part in international affairs.

King George V was born June 3 1865 and takes command at the very prime of life. He married Princess Victoria Mary who has taken the title of Queen Mary and whom all England has named Queen May in 1893. She was brought to the Duchess of Teck and granddaughter of the old Duke of Cambridge who was Queen Victoria's uncle.

The new King takes from King Albert of Belgium the title of the most traveled of crowned heads. In fact it is doubtful if any king ever covered as much territory as George V. South Africa India and Australia are some of the widely diversified places to which he has taken long trips. But for the sudden death of King Edward King George would have opened the new Parliament of the confederated British dominions in South Africa.

King George will probably reside most of the time at Windsor Castle following the title of his grandmother Queen Victoria. Buckingham Palace was King Edward's home but undoubtedly it will remain the residence of Queen Alexandra now the Queen Mother. Buckingham Palace one of the show places of the greatest city of the world is the other residence wherein most of the important events of King George's reign may be expected to occur.

The King does not like Windsor Castle because of the many ghosts that are said to haunt the place. Windsor Castle is the oldest royal residence in England and has been occupied by the sovereigns of England for nearly 800 years. It is situated on a hill overlooking the Thames River and is surrounded by a park of 4,800 acres. The Castle is a magnificent building and is filled with many valuable works of art. It is also the home of the Order of the Garter, the highest order of knighthood in England.

King George V is a great lover of horses and dogs. He is also a keen sportsman and enjoys shooting and fishing. He is a member of many clubs and societies. He is also a patron of many charities. He is a man of the people and is loved by his subjects.

King George V is married to Princess Victoria Mary of Teck, who is a granddaughter of Queen Victoria. They have six children, five sons and one daughter. All are splendid specimens of English childhood.

BIG SITE IS ACQUIRED FOR NEW SHOVEL WORKS

Option on the Land Is Closed Up Saturday.

ANOTHER INDUSTRY STARTING IN MARION

John D. Owens Holds the Options and with Him Is Associated Arthur E. Cheney, Long Identified Prominently with the Steam Shovel Business.

The first steps have been taken looking to the establishment of a new steam shovel works in Marion. On Saturday options were taken for three tracts of land in south Marion, aggregating approximately 120 acres for which a purchase price is fixed at about $30,000. The three tracts are the Adam Bingle piece of thirteen acres, the Christian dairy farm of forty-five acres, and the sixty-five acres of the J. C. Ringer farm—the portion lying west of the Pennsylvania railroad and the Prospect pike. The combined tracts embrace one of the finest stretches adjoining the city, fronting both Bellefontaine avenue and Prospect street, extended.

The options were taken by John D. Owens, whose name always stands for big things in whatever he undertakes. At the present time no official information is given out, but no one disputes that the options are the foundation steps for a new steam shovel factory, which has a lot of advance assurance as to needed capital, and with the promoters will be associated Arthur E. Cheney, who has been identified prominently with the business for twenty-five years. Mr. Cheney has recently been the recipient of attractive propositions in other cities, but Marion capitalists are arguing that there is no better place in the United States for steam shovel building than right here in Marion, and there are prospects of a new enterprise speedily under way, to add to Marion's prominence in the industrial world.

Plans of organization are not available. It is readily apparent, however, that the optioned land fits handily to a large undertaking. The land is touched by both the Hocking Valley and Pennsylvania railways, and the fine stretches to the southward contain enough acreage to yield a fine real estate development.

A factory of the most modern equipment and of ample size to turn out twelve to fifteen shovels a month is a part of the general plan.

CHILDREN TAKEN BY A HUMANE OFFICER

Following the Arrest of Their Mother,

AS SHE IS ABOUT TO LEAVE COUNTY

Albert Riley Would Like To Have His Little Ones Placed in the Waddel Children's Home—Effort Will Be Made To Have Them Placed in Proper Hands.

Following the arrest of Mrs. Minnie Riley and Samuel Brady in the Riley woman's home, at Morral, Thursday night, Humane Officer J. W. Ush drove to Morral, Friday afternoon, and took the two children of Mrs. Riley from her as she was about to board a train for parts unknown. The children, Opal, aged ten, and Raymond, aged seven, are now in the custody of the Marion County Humane society, and probably will be sent to the Waddel Children's home.

Last May, Mrs. Riley brought an action for divorce from Albert Riley. She charged him with cruelty. Riley contested, and the case was thrown out of court by Judge W. E. Scofield, who granted a temporary injunction however, restraining the father from going to his wife's home or in any way interfering with the children.

Last Thursday night, Marshal Fred McCumber, of Morral, suspecting that the moral conditions at the Riley home were not proper for the children, paid an unexpected visit to the place. He found the children in one bed, and Mrs. Riley and Brady in another bed in the same room. He placed both under arrest. Mayor Frank Berry fined them after they had pleaded guilty to a charge of immorality. Brady's fine and costs amounted to $11, which he settled. Mrs. Riley, whose fine and costs amounted to $27, was not so fortunate and she was compelled to stay in the village lock-up several hours. She was later released on bond.

Albert Riley, the father of the two children, learning of the affair, immediately notified the humane authorities, and asked that the children be sent to the children's home. He has been paying three dollars a week for their support at Morral, and says he would be glad to pay that amount or any sum deemed reasonable by the authorities for their maintenance at the Waddel Children's home.

Brady has a divorced wife and pays $16 a month to Justice Charles E. Gompf for the support of his children.

Attorney J. H. Eymon, who represents the humane society, will ask Judge Scofield to dissolve the temporary injunction now in the common pleas court in order that the two children may be properly cared for.

FOUR YOUTHS GET GAY WITH GUNS

Two Are Arrested, but Other Two Get Away.

SEARCH FOR MISSING DUO BEING MADE

One Shoots Gun in the Air While Other Three Cover Constable Who Tries To Arrest Him—Constable Is Relieved of His Mace—Four Are Residents of Espyville.

Young men with guns caused considerable excitement at Espyville, Monday night, and two of the quartet are held under bond in Justice C. H. Conley's court, while warrants are out for the other two offenders.

The two under arrest are Thurston Sexton, aged seventeen, and Oscar Yenner, aged twenty-two, while the two still at large are Sid McClung, aged twenty-one, and William Yenner, aged twenty. McClung is charged with shooting without malice, and the other four are charged with pointing firearms. All reside near Espyville.

According to the story, the four young men called out the constable at Espyville, and put up a fight through one work with them e'se. Constable Samuel Rush was called between 9 and 10 o'clock to the Erie tracks, where the four were located at the time, to quiet them. When Rush addressed the fellows, they relieved him of his mace and three pointed their revolvers at him, while McClung, who is the son of Rush, came to Marion, Tuesday, and filed affidavits against the quartet, and Constable Elson went out to arrest them. McClung and William Yenner received a tip and got away. When arraigned before Justice Conley, Sexton and Oscar Yenner entered pleas of not guilty and were placed under bond of $100, each, for trial. They will be given a hearing as soon as the other two are taken into custody.

WOMAN IS ORDERED TO LEAVE THE CITY

Affidavit for Loitering Sworn to by Husband.

SHE REFUSES TO GO HOME WITH HIM

Prefers To Remain with Three Companions at Lincoln Park—Two Male Companions Not Arrested. Hazel Howard Starts To Return to Her Home.

Bessie Jeffers and Laura Fasnaught-Miller were arrested in Lincoln park, Sunday afternoon, on a charge of loitering. The arrest of the two was the result of a complaint made by the husband of the Jeffers woman that she and her companion were with two fellows at the park, and she refused to accompany him home.

Monday the husband of the woman filed an affidavit against the two women charging them with loitering. When brought before the mayor, Monday morning, the Jeffers woman was ordered out of town, and the other woman was released. They declared they were not guilty of the charge against them, and, regardless of any past record, did not see how they could be arrested for loitering in a park and the men with them not taken into custody.

Chief Kinsbelter received a telegram, Monday, from the father of Hazel Howard, the girl who was enticed away from her home at Abingdon, Illinois, and deserted in this city last Friday by her supposed lover.
